Firm Owed $900,000 to Government, Says Former Employe.

'Ridiculous,' Say Company Chiefs

(Associated Press.)

Testimony that the Government failed to audit properly the account by which the Delaware du Ponts disputedly made a profit of $1,961,000 at no financial risk to themselves was presented yesterday to the Senate Munitions Committee.

Arthur C. Carnduff, former special attorney in the Justice Department, asserted he was removed from the case in 1923 by Attorney General Dougherty at a time when he was convinced the company owed the Government at least $900,000 and possibly more.

Members of the du Pont family immediately and emphatically challenged all these assertions. They termed "ridiculous" a statement that the "profit" figure represented a 39,231 per cent return on investment and contended that after deducting taxes and other outlays the figure dwindled to $286,346.

Department Auditors.

In response to Carnduff's testimony, they said the War Department maintained a staff of auditors in Wilmington during the war who scrutinized everything so closely that they once disallowed a $2 expenditure for a fountain pen, because the pen could not be found.

In an ultimate statement, they told the committee, the $900,000 of which Carnduff spoke was reduced to about $400,000 by the deductions of sums later found to be due the company from the Government. They denied, too, a Carnduff statement that when he left the case they had conceded his claim to be correct and were ready to settle for $900,000 in return for a "receipt in full."

Looking forward to the future conduct of the investigation, the committeee considered going into the connection of the banks to the munitions manufacturers, in which case J. P. Morgan & Co. would be subjected to another Senate grilling. The bank acted as purchasing agent for the allies in the procurement of war supplies here.

Old Hickory Contract.

Carnduff said that what he wanted more than anything else was an audit of the company's books covering the contract for the famous Old Hickory powder plant in Tennessee.

He reiterated "there had been no thorough audit by the Government." The only complete audit that he knew of had been made by the du Ponts themselves, he asserted.

Alger Hiss, alert young committee investigator, who conducted the examination, asked Lieut. Col. C. T. Harris, of the War Department, to bring to next Monday's hearing all the War Department records concerning the auditing of the du Pont account. This, he said later, was for the purpose of establishing that no complete audit had been made and no records could be found.

Months of Negotiations.

The signing of the Old Hickory contract was preceded by several months of negotiations, and the can-

Machado Flees To Switzerland

Leaves Germany to Dodge Cuba's Continued Move for Extradition.

Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 14 (AP).—Gerardo Machado sped toward the Swiss border tonight, apparently fleeing again Cuba's attempt to extradite him for crimes she charges he committed during his presidency.

The former president-dictator, who came to Germany this week to try Germany's "water cure" for the intestinal ailment he has been suffering, left by automobile shortly after German secret police called at his boarding house here.

Apparently the police advised Machado that he would be wise to leave the country before the Cuban Legation at Berlin, acting on instructions from Havana, requested his arrest for an extradition hearing.

With Machado went Dr. Eugenio Molinet, his former secretary of agriculture and personal physician, and the rest of the little band of exiles that has been hunted since Machado fled from Cuba, August 12, 1933.

Tennis Star Faces Trial.

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Berkeley Bell, 29-year-old tennis star, was paroled today in magistrate's court for trial in special sessions court on a charge of illegal possession of two revolvers, in violation of the Sullivan law.

Doctor Says Mrs. Bell Suffered From Poison

Symptoms of Arsenic Present Nearly a Year, He Testifies; Mrs. McMullin Admits Receiving Gifts; State Rests Case.

By Bart Sheridan
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 14.—The Commonwealth of Virginia rested its case today against Edward C. Bell, churchman and civic leader, accused of poisoning his invalid wife, as Dr. John E. Cole, Mrs. Bell's physician, testified that Mrs. Bell has shown arsenic poisoning symptoms for almost a year.

Mrs. Ella McMullin, alleged "other woman" from Richmond, whose testimony was expected to produce the trial's most sensational disclosures, remained on the witness stand less than one minute, although curious citizens had jammed the courtroom an hour before court reconvened this afternoon to hear details of her asserted acquaintance with Bell. Her testimony revealed only that she has known Bell for three years and has received money from him. She also said in answer to a prosecution question that she spent some time last summer at Buckroe Beach, Va.

Abner C. Goode, Mrs. McMullin's attorney, was closeted before the afternoon session with Judge Frederick W. Coleman and prosecution and defense attorneys. Judge Coleman is believed to have ruled informally against Prosecutor Albert V. Bryan's intended line of questioning. Bryan in his opening argument declared that Bell's affections were "elsewhere than in his home."

Other Developments.

Other developments in today's sessions were the evidence of Rebecca Burruss, colored, former cook in the Bell household, who said that on three occasions she saw Bell "sprinkling powder" on food intended for his wife, and testimony by Oliver Morrison, former Bell furniture store employe, that Bell asked him to shadow a Richmond woman who was vacationing at Buckroe Beach, Va., and report her activities.

Defense counsel will begin its case tomorrow. W. Marshall King, associate defense attorney, said the testimony would consume about two days and that "at least a dozen" witnesses will be called.

Dr. Cole, long the Bell family physician and close personal friend of the defendant, voiced his belief from the witness stand that Mrs. Bell had been subjected to arsenic poisoning "as early as February."

"Had Mrs. Bell suffered from effects of poisoning before your suspicions became aroused?" Bryan asked the witness.

"In my opinion she had," Dr. Cole replied.

"From what time did this condition exist?"

"She has suffered from chronic poisoning, and still is. I believe she suffered as early as last February."

Questioned by Goolrick.

On cross-examination Dr. Cole told Attorney C. O'Connor Goolrick that he would have become suspicious early in the year had he not been in a home in which I had such confidence." Previously asked why he believed Mrs. Bell suffered from poisoning as early as February, Dr. Cole named several symptoms of poisoning exhibited by Mrs. Bell at that time.

"You saw all those symptoms,"

Spanish Court-Martial Frees President's Son

Jaca, Spain, Dec. 14 (AP).—A court-martial tonight acquitted Young Luis Zamora, son of President Niceto Alcala Zamora and corporal in the Spanish army, of charges of insubordination. The charges were lodged against the youth shortly after the radical revolution of October.

Zamora's father agreed that the boy should be prosecuted to the full extent of the military law, it was announced when he was placed under arrest November 1.

Student Air Crash Victim Dies.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dec. 14 (AP).—R. W. Crawford, University of Alabama junior, of Wilmington, Del., died in a hospital today of injuries received yesterday when his plane crashed near the airport here.

Hitler Unhurt As Train Rams Bus, Killing 14

He Helps Care for Victims; 7 Others in Theatrical Troup Injured.

Bremen, Germany, Dec. 14 (AP).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's life was imperiled tonight when his special train, en route from Bremen to Berlin, crashed into a bus near here, killing 14 persons.

The seven other passengers of the bus, all seriously injured, were taken to a hospital. Those killed and injured were described as theatrical performers.

Though shaken by the crash, which occurred while his train was returning at high speed from christening ceremonies held at Bremen for a new 18,000-ton North German Lloyd liner, Hitler alighted from the train and walked the mile back up the track where the demolished bus and the bodies lay.

After lifting his hand in the Nazi salute over the torn and broken bodies of the dead, Hitler helped to pick up the scattered remains.

Aboard the train were such Nazi notables as Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of war; Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, economic dictator of the Reich, and Wilhelm Brueckner, Hitler's adjutant.

Just before the train continued to Berlin Hitler stood before the covered bodies and again gave the Nazi salute. The party was delayed an hour by the accident.

The driver of the bus, unable to see through fog and dusk, drove through crossing gates onto the track. The bus was filled with an itinerant theatrical troup.

Politics in Churches Forbidden by Nazis

Berlin, Dec. 14 (AP).—Church meetings of "political character" were forbidden today in an order issued by Nazi secret police. Opposition church circles immediately declared the move was another attempt to crush them.

They said they regarded this latest move as most grave in view of yesterday's law making the death penalty possible for criticism of the state or the Nazi Party.

Flood Follows Torrent of Rain in California

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (AP).—Flood waters a half mile wide swept La Crescenta Valley today as a climax to the heaviest southern California rainfall in 45 years.

At Montrose, where 30 persons were drowned in last New Year's flood, many of the 300 residents fled their homes, only to return tonight as the threat of danger dissipated.

Coast Guard Cutter Off to Aid Schooner

Boston, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Coast Guard was notified today that a four-masted schooner was in distress off Nantucket, near Pollack Rip Light Ship. The schooner was variously reported as the Halvena or Halvaena. She was flying the old international code signal of distress, "NC."

The cutter Algonquin left Woods Hole at 3:30 p. m. and was expected to reach the schooner within five hours.

U. S. Indicts Weiss, Chief Aid of Long

Faces $10,000 Fine or 5 Years; 8 Huey Allies Now Accused.

New Orleans, Dec. 14 (AP).—United States income tax investigators today struck Huey Long's chief political ally when the Federal grand jury here indicted Seymour Weiss on seven counts of attempting to defeat and evade the income tax. Conviction would carry a maximum of $10,000, imprisonment for five years, or both, on each count.

The indictment charged Weiss, Long's political treasurer, should have reported an aggregate net income for himself and his wife amounting to $232,095.73, for the calendar years 1929 to 1933, inclusive, while he reported only $55,123.47, leaving an understatement of $176,972.26.

Charges Income Tax Evasion.

The grand jury also charged that Weiss reported only 23 per cent of the correct net income and that the Government was due a total of $26,398.36 as income tax for the five-year period.

Mrs. Weiss was not indicted.

For 1929, 1930 and 1931, Weiss filed joint returns with his wife. The returns for 1932 and 1933 were separate returns on the community property basis.

The indictment charged Weiss attempted to defeat and evade the tax of his wife for 1932 and 1933 by preparing and filing returns for her in which her community net income was underestimated.

Eighth Long Aid Indicted.

The five years cited in the indictment against Weiss cover a period during which the State administration headed by Long handled about $350,000,000 of State money, nearly $100,000,000 of it in State highway bonds.

Weiss was the eighth man indicted among leaders in the Long political machine in Louisiana and the income tax investigators, busy for months, were continuing their inquiry with an investigation of the income tax returns filed by Gov. O. K. Allen and Senator Long.

The Government alleged that more than $1,000,000 was involved in unreported net income by this group of Long supporters.

Women to Renew Fight on Long

A group of Louisiana women, headed by Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, New Orleans society leader, is here to put a tack on Huey Long's seat in the Senate.

In the last six months, the Louisiana kingfish has become more powerful than ever. He is even toying with the idea of running for President. But that doesn't scare the women's committee of Louisiana.

They tried vainly to get a hearing before a Senate committee in the last Congress. They had 32 charges to prefer against Long and his colleague, Senator Overton. When the Senate ignored them, the women charged the senators were "afraid" of Huey. Now the women are back to resume their fight for a hearing.

Boy, 8, Drowned Trying To Save Older Brother

McPherson, Kans., Dec. 14 (AP). Clyde Mills, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elcy Mills, drowned in a pond in the Ritz oil field near here today while attempting to rescue his brother, Knute, 11, who had broken through the ice while skating.

'Old Liners' Urge G.O.P. Senate Unity

Fight on 'Objectionable' New Deal Policies Demanded.

Seating of Holt Will Be Challenged on Age Limit Issue.

Determined not to submit passively to the left-wing movement for Republican reorganization, a conservative element in G. O. P. senatorial ranks will demand a "constructive opposition" program at a Senate Republican conference called for January 2.

This developed yesterday, as so-called "liberals" and "stand patters" alike united on a plan to force Rush D. Holt, 29-year-old Democratic Senator-elect from West Virginia, out of his seat for at least the first six months of the Seventy-fourth Congress.

Smarting under the Progressive lash of Senators William E. Borah and Gerald P. Nye, Republican old liners are prepared to call for a forceful program against "objectionable" phases of New Deal policies to balance an internal program of "self criticism," Senate Progressives wil attempt to checkmate them in the party conference.

To Combine Offices.

In the interest of compact action, minority leaders virtually have decided to combine the Senate offices of Republican assistant leader and Republican whip into one effective spearhead. Seantor Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, is said to be slated for the job.

Senator Charles P. McNary, of Oregon, Senate minority leader, already has decided to ask Holt to "stand aside" if he persists in presenting his credentials to the Senate on January 3. But first, McNary will confer with Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson in an effort to persuade Holt not to claim his seat until he attains the legal age of 30.

Walter S. Hallanan, Republican national committeeman from West Virginia, yesterday conferred with a number of Republican Senators, armed with a legal opinion that the West Virginia Senator-elect is not qualified under the Constitution to take the oath.

He vigorously contends that failure of Holt to "qualify" on the day Congress opens, will create a vacancy that can be filled only by appointment by the West Virginia Governor. He says Holt illegally swore he was "qualified" to hold office last July 5 when he was in fact a year shy of the legal age.

Faction Leaders.

Although it is a minor issue, involving only one Democratic seat, unity of Republicans on this point may strike a keynote of minority harmony on others, it was said. Despite their small voting strength, Republicans admittedly could tie up Holt's seat for weeks, and possibly for the session, if they forced a review by the Privileges and Elections Committee.

Efforts to Mediate Trolley Strike Fail

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Efforts of the National Mediation Board to effect a settlement between the Pacific Electric Railway and its workmen have failed, union heads announced late today. A crippling strike of interurban trainmen is regarded probable.

Should the trainmen strike, it was believed they would be joined by workmen of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific systems, a move calculated to paralyze all freight movement into and out of the port of Los Angeles.

Weiss Slain by Gang; Mais and Police Battle

Philadelphia, Dec. 14 (AP).—Police tonight said their gangland round-up had convinced them that William Weiss, missing night life figure, was killed and thrown into the Delaware River.

Though asserting that both the Weiss disappearance and the killing of William Feitz, a Camden, N. J., detective, are virtually solved, the authorities would not discuss a report that persons now in custody have admitted that the gang of Robert Mais is responsible for the abduction of Weiss and that his body now lay weighted in the river.

Before raiding a North Philadelphia home, which yielded a gangland arsenal and "some money," which may be part of the $25,000 reputed to have been paid in vain for Weiss' release, detectives exchanged shots at Wayne Junction Station with three gunmen they say included Mais and Walter Legenza. Both are desperadoes who shot their way out of a Richmond, Va., jail, where they had been awaiting death for the slaying of a mail truck driver in a holdup.

In the raid the detectives took Charles Zeid, wanted for the Camden killing; Frank R. Wiley, who traveled a sewer out of the Eastern Penitentiary to liberty last July, and Mrs. Beatrice Wilkinson, mother of three children.

The officers found the three little girls crying in the house a moment after blasting open the front door lock and firing at one of the men who tried to escape through a second-floor window.

Weiss, his family told Federal agents, was abducted outside his home on the night of October 26. His wife received several ransom notes and telephone calls and tried to communicate with the abductors, she told the agents. The Federal division of investigation was not notified of the abduction until about three weeks after it took place.

Detective Feitz was shot in Camden when he interrupted the robbery of an alleged disorderly house.

Mrs. Buccolo Set Free In Slaying of Husband

Mrs. Mary Irene Buccolo, with her brother, J. Francis Soper, and her mother, Mrs. Flora E. Mack, right, is shown just after her acquittal.

Crowded Courtroom Hears 'Not Guilty' Verdict; Host of Friends Congratulate Woman Who Claimed She Killed in Self-Defense.

Mrs. Mary Irene Buccolo was acquitted of the murder of her husband, Rudolph, in District Supreme Court late yesterday afternoon.

A jury of ten men and two women, which had listened to evidence since Tuesday, took just one hour to reach the verdict which allowed Mrs. Buccolo to return to her family's home for the first time since her arrest 14 months ago.

A crowded courtroom heard the jury foreman read the verdict after Justice James M. Proctor had warned against a demonstration. Friends and relatives of the acquitted woman rushed to her side and for a few minutes the room buzzed with excitement.

Mrs. Buccolo, formerly an employe of the Civil Service Commission, appeared dazed at the verdict. When asked for a statement by reporters, she shook her head, but later, after a conference with defense counsel, she posed for photographers. Shortly afterwards she left for the home of her aged mother, where relatives and close friends planned a quiet celebration.

Jury Out For an Hour.

The jury, which was chosen after both the Government and the defense had exhausted their challenges, received the case shortly after 4:30 o'clock. Justice Proctor left the courtroom and said he would return in an hour. A large crowd, anxious to hear the verdict, remained.

Before Justice Proctor had returned, the foreman of the jury rapped on the jury room door, announcing that a unanimous decision had been reached. A brief search for the justice was started. His first words were to warn aginst any demonstration. "I want to admonish you to continue the high degree of solemnity and respect with which you have attended this trial," he said.

Mrs. Buccolo, flanked by defense counsel, arose to hear the verdict. A deputy marshal helped her to her feet. She appeared pale and wan, but otherwise unaffected by the tension of the moment. The jury foreman fumbled in his coat for a slip of paper on which he had written the verdict.

Widow Congratulated.

Asked the formal question as to how the jury stood, the foreman announced in a slightly husky voice: "Not guilty." There was an immediate reaction. The jury filed out, and friends and relatives of Mrs. Buccolo rushed to her side. There was a host of well wishers to congratulate her.

The charge against Mrs. Buccolo, as presented by the Government, was that she telephoned her estranged husband to meet her at her home, where she lived with her mother. Just a few days prior to that, she had purchased a .32 caliber pistol.

When Buccolo arrived, he went to his wife's bedroom, where a discussion concerning the marital difficulties of the two was begun. Buccolo, his widow claimed, later walked toward her, shouting: "I'll

Stokowski to Return If Aid Is Chosen

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 14 (AP). Leopold Stokowski, who resigned from the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, tonight told a reporter from the Daily Princetonian, campus publication, he would return to the musical organization if an executive director could be appointed who would take care of business affairs and leave the music to Stokowski.

"I was forever being troubled with affairs of business, and the board's conception of our musical program seemed to differ with mine."

Rescue Fails, Storm at Sea Takes 8 Lives

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Eight seamen apparently lost their lives today in the north Atlantic as a crew of Belgians tried in a frail lifeboat to row a British ship's men to safety.

The rescuers, members of the ship's company of the small Antwerp freighter Jean Jadot, put out in the face of the worst storm of the winter when the still smaller British freighter Usworth frantically signaled that all hope had been abandoned.

The Englishmen, bound from Montreal to Cobh, Ireland, were so exhausted from weary hours of fighting the sea aboard their foundering ship that they were unable to pull on board the lines shot to them by the Belgians.

Launch Boat in Storm.

Risking almost certain death in the mountainous waves, the Belgians launched a boat and made one trip from the Usworth to the British liner Ascania, also standing by, with five of the Englishmen on board.

They made a second trip across the perilous water but on their return the Belgian boat capsized, taking down two of the rescue crew and six men from the Usworth.

Descriptions of the tragedy which reached the shore were brief but portrayed a grim struggle against the elements.

Hero Commands Ship.

The Jean Jadot, commanded by Capt. Sadie Gonthier, a hero two years ago of a previous sea rescue, wirelessed it had two of the Usworth men on board.

The Ascania, bound from Southampton for New York, reported for 18 others.

When the last men had been rescued the Usworth was afloat, but was foundering hopelessly.

Broadcasts Appeal.

Desperately, the Usworth early this morning broadcast this appeal: "Please do your best to get us off." The message added, "The situation

Rural Mail Carriers Must Pay Gas Tax

Rural mail carriers must pay roal toll in the form of gasoline taxes imposed by States.

The Supreme Court so decided without a written opinion yesterday in a case from New Hampshire, the Associated Press reports.

Nathan A. Tirrell, a rural mail carrier, through Samuel A. Margolis, his counsel, protested the New Hampshire tax of two cents a gallon was invalid because it was imposed on a Governmental agency. It was brought out by members of the court that Tirrell paid without protest the license tax imposed by the State.

Power Group Reconsiders Plan to Fight TVA in Court

Roosevelt Infers Revision of Set-up

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Aroused only two weeks ago to the point of threatening a court fight on the TVA, the Nation's largest power interests have reconsidered and are sending emissaries to make their peace with the White House, it was indicated yesterday.

President Roosevelt himself said that those with whom he has talked in the last few days have shown a desire to cooperate with the Government's power policies.

From other sources came word that the Edison Electric Institute has no intention of filing its proposed suit to test the constitutionality of the TVA. In one quarter, the industry's threat of a suit was said to be recognized as a "strategic blunder."

Recapitalization Seen.

The inference was that private power interests, while alarmed by the President's militant speeches in the Tennessee Valley, have come to a realization that more is to be gained by going along with the Administration than in courting disaster at the hands of the New Deal.

That this may mean recapitalization was seen in the President's remark that a number of utility leaders agree that water should be squeezed out of utility stocks to bring down rates. In general, the President was believed to be driving a wedge between companies, strictly operating in character, and the holding companies on top of them.

TVA Program Pushed.

Further notice that there will be no backtracking in the power program came from Knoxville, Tenn., where TVA Director David E. Lilienthal invited the mayors of three north Alabama cities to build their own distribution plants to handle surplus TVA power.

Legal delays in the purchase of Alabama Power Co. facilities in 14 municipalities have exhausted the patience of the TVA, Lilienthal declared. In a brusque statement, he laid the blame for obstructing the sale on the Alabama Power Co.

Ever since President Roosevelt's return from his Southern trip, utility representatives have beaten a path to the White House. Questioned as to the conferences, he replied that his callers have been amicably disposed and have disclaimed any connection with the fight on the TVA.

Points to Utility Set-Up.

The power question, he asserted, is largely one of fact, that is, how much capital is necessary to provide for the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity. If an agreement could be reached on those figures, he said, a determination of proper earnings and of rates to assure those earnings would be simple arithmetic.

If existing capital, he remarked significantly, should be found to be above a proper value, then it is just unfortunate. The intimation was clear that such utility set-ups must be reorganized in order that the public be given the benefit of reduced rates.

Questioned as to using the cost of reproduction as the basis for evaluating utilities, Mr. Roosevelt replied that the difficulty has been the desire of companies to enhance values when prices are rising, while keeping them up when prices fall.

Many are coming to the prudent investment theory, a system of arriving at values by computing the actual reasonable investment, the President said. To a statement that the United States Supreme Court has not yet come to this idea, Mr. Roosevelt smilingly said the question has not yet reached the Supreme Court.

Latest of the utility visitors was Floyd Carlisle, board chairman of Niagara-Hudson Power Co., who is

2 Cuban Parties Unite To Protest Press Raid

Havana, Dec. 14 (AP).—Politics made queer bedfellows again here today as the Autentico Party joined its old-time enemy, the ABC Society, in protesting an allegedly government-inspired raid on the ABC newspaper Accion.

Directors of the Autentico group, which rose to prominence with the army uprising of September, 1933, that placed Ramon Grau San Martin in the presidency, ratified an ABC statement that the raid was an "outrage."

Drewry Election Cost Nothing.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of Petersburg, Democratic member of Congress from the Fourth Virginia District, was reelected to the House in November without spending a cent in the campaign, he reported today to secretary of the commonwealth, Peter Saunders.

A.F. of L. Wants Labor Policies Of NRA to Last

Green Suggests Permanent Section 7a in Parley With Roosevelt.

That the Government expects to continue supervision over labor-employer relations was made clear yesterday by President Roosevelt, Secretary Perkins and Donald Richberg, New Deal coordinator.

The question of the future relationship of the Government to labor was thrown into the hopper when William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, presented to the President recommendations of his organization for future legislation.

Foremost was the recommendation that section 7a of the National Industrial Recovery Act be "made the law of the land," becoming operative even for those industries not covered by codes. Green asked that this section be re-enacted exactly as it stands. He said he believed that the National Labor Relations Board has interpreted properly the intent of the section. He added that labor is "apprehensive" about suggesting any changes, feeling that "tinkering" by Congress might result in changes for the worse.

Supervision Must Continue.

Richberg, following luncheon with the President, declared that Government supervision of labor relations must continue, on the ground that "Government sanction must necessarily mean Government supervision." He said, however, that there is some question as to whether every form of employment could come under direct Government supervision under the theory that it affects interstate commerce.

"It is a little hard to see, for instance," he said, "how the relationship of the owner of a barber shop to a porter employed in that shop would affect interstate commerce."

President Roosevelt clinched the contention that labor provisions of the recovery act will be etained with a declaration that undoubtedly the Government will continue to participate in all labor problems.

He declared that the Government is not going to abandon its interest in working conditions, minimum wages and child labor.

Miss Perkins' View.

Secretary Perkins, speaking at a conference on labor standards, meeting here yesterday, said that "no reasonable American wants to go back to the old system of unregulated hours, wages and child labor."

Meanwhile, labor's stand in favor of section 7(a) was strengthened by a decision of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board ordering the Texas Co. to dissolve a company union at its West Tulsa, Okla., plant. The decision was approved by Secretary Ickes.

The decision gave the company 15 days in which to dissolve the union. The decision was the first made by any governmental board dissolving a company union. The board held that the action of the company in forming its own organization of employes was in direct violation of section 7(a). The board charged employes were coerced into joining the union.

Labor's Program.

The program of labor, as presented to the President by Green, in addition to retention of section 7(a), calls for continuation of maximum hours and minimum wage conditions, provisions against unfair trade practices, and abolition of child labor. The President indicated that he was in agreement with Green on all of these things.

"Labor is opposed," Green said following his visit to the White House, "to the suggestion of manufacturers that the administration of codes be turned over to industry itself. We think the Government should administer codes."

Green declared he favored giving labor equal representation with industry on all administrative boards. Richberg questioned the practical operation of such a system. He said he believed that better results could be obtained from "neutral" boards. He said experience had shown that when a board is made up of a representative of labor, a representative of industry and a neutral individual, the third member usually had to do all the deciding.

Child Labor Stand.

Both President Roosevelt and Richberg expressed approval of retention of child labor provisions. Richberg expressed the opinion that Congress could enact effective child labor legislation without a constitutional amendment.

Green indicated that the Federation of Labor proposal for a 30-hour week would not be made a part of recommendations for future NRA legislation but that labor expected to go directly to Congress with this proposal. Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, expects to reintroduce his bill for a 30-hour week in industry.

Green's expressed opposition to turnng administration of codes over to industry is expected to be met with a counter move next week when 100 business and industrial leaders from all parts of the country meet at White Sulphur Springs to map recommendations for future business legislation.

The conference has been called jointly by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers. The manufacturers' association already has gone on record as believing that "an approved code should place upon industry the primary obligation of policy enforcement."

Both President Roosevelt and Richberg confined their statements to the relationship of the Government to labor. The question of price-fixing undoubtedly will arise as the recovery act is rewritten, but there is a strong possibility that price-fixing will be abandoned.

This was indicated in an address in New York Thursday by S. Clay Williams, chairman of the National Industral Recovery Board, before a group of commercial organizations. Williams indicated the belief that when wage and working conditions are settled, prices will take care of themselves.

"I am asking you," he said, "if it may not be true that when full compliance with wage and hour provisions of codes is established it may not then appear that provisions by way of putting floors under prices may not in most industries and businesses be found to be of no importance whatever?

"Provisions for proper wages and hours can have the full support of public opinion; it is doubtful whether direction provisions for the maintenance of price floors can, in business generally, have that support in this country."

Between You and Me

Borah And His Reorganization Drive; Roosevelt Rifts Power Boys.

By Raymond Clapper

MANY ARE PUZZLED as to what Senator Borah is drving at in his agitation for reorganization of the Republican Party. He has indicated at least three things.

First, he is trying to shift the party's center of gravity farther West. For years the Republican Party has existed as an aliance between Eastern financiers and industrialsts on the one hand and Western farmers and smal business men on the other. That was the result of trying to maintain a natoinal party on a geographical basis rather than on community of economic interest. Often these two wings of the party are directly opposed to each other. Eastern creditors line up on one side and Western debtors on the other. Industry wants tariff protection, whereas agriculture wants cheap factory products and dear foodstuffs.

The Western group was powerful in Congress throughout the years of Republican domination at Washington because it was able to form a bipartisan alliance with the Southern agricultural bloc of the Democratic Party. Though powerful in Congress, the Western group never dominatel the national party machinery. By a policy of broad tolerance, the Republican Party allowed its La Follettes and its Norrises have as much rope as they wanted. But always the party machinery was in the hands of the Eastern industrialists and financiers. At national conventions and at the White House it was Penrose, Hilles, Ogden Mills and such leaders of the Eastern group that dominated and picked Presidents. Westerners went along under this Eastern domination of the party machinery because they had their outlet in Congress.

Now they are faced with extinction under the heel of the Roosevelt Democratic Party unless they can get control of the Republican Party machinery. Borah, who himself has been liested by the Administrator for extinction when he comes up for reelection next year, is giving large voice to this demand.

* * * *

Second, Borah sees a problem to be solved in determining the status of individual liberty under the post-depression order of things. The trend here as in Europe is toward the authori tarian state. Our democratic traditions have prevented us from going as far as Mussolini or Hitler or Stalin. Still we are extending the state's sphere of influence over economic activity.

In 1929 we never would have dreamed that the Federal Government should say how much cotton a Georgia farmer could grow. We never would have dreamed that the Federal Government could convict a small battery manufacturer on a criminal charge of paying his workmen less than the rate specified in a code approved by the White House.

How to reconcile this increased control with the personal liberty which is ingrained so deeply in American poliitcal and racial tradition is the great problem which confronts liberals. Self-government can be a more ruthless tyrant than a dictator. Return to economic anarchy is impossible and therefore not an answer.

Borah says that "if we can hold the lines of constitution government, if we can preserve personal liberty and at the same time give men and women security and social justice, if, under the constitution, we can work out a system which will give to labor and to the producers their rightful share of the wealth they produce, we will have performed a service to civilization second to none in the history of the world." He has stated the problem, but given no answer.

Third, Borah is blasting at monopoly. This, many think, is a throwback to the middle period of the first Roosevelt, which was incidentally the day of Borah's greatest power inside the party. In this opposition to monopoly Borah is close to Brandeis and to the New Freedom of Wilson, but a long way from the New Deal which seems to accept large scale production as inevitable and is concerned with regulating it.

Some New Dealers believe that electric power spells the doom of great concentrated industry because it makes power portable in contrast to steam which requires that the machine come to it. For this reason many New Dealers believe that we are on the verge of a decentralization of industry, arising, however, not out of political pressure against monopoly, but by the development of a new force which will turn machines in your own basement with power produced hundreds of miles away. That, rather than antimonopoly legislation, they think, will break up large industry and permit the rise of small factories on a scale, such as existed in the old handcraft days before the steam age.

Borah is not counting on that. He is thinking of forced pulverization by political action. He sees the New Deal, as does Herbert Hoover, as encouraging monopoly on a greater scale than at any time since the Elizabethan guilds. He points to the internal revenue collections for 1933, the first year of the New Deal, which showed the number of millionaires more than doubled while those earning $5,000 or less went down.

* * * *

One thing more, if it doesn't Borah you too much. If the two great parties are to be preserved on a geographical basis, Borah's course seems logical. But Mr. Roosevelt already has undertaken to reorganize the Democratic party on a basis of economic interest. He moved so rapidly that he caught the Republicans asleep and almost decimated them. If the Republican Party intends to meet that challenge by attempting to reorganize on an economic basis, its natural field is among the conservative forces, a number of which no doubt could be pulled out of the Democratic Party as Mr. Roosevelt has pulled great hunks of debtor class votes out of the Republican Party. In that case Senator Borah would be left out on a limb.

* * * *

If you want to know why those utilities men are slipping into the White House daily, the answer is that Mr. Roosevelt is driving a wedge into the private power interests.

He is gayly taking advantage of the coolness between operating utilities men and the holding company boys. Utilities operators feel that holding company promoters have gouged and bled them, levying tribute disguised as "management" costs which keep rates up.

Mr. Roosevelt is most sympathetic when these operators cry on his shoulder. He sends them away convinced that if they will shake the holding company parasites off their backs they can sell power cheaply enough to satisfy the New Deal yardstick and will be spared. He's stirring up a first-class rebellion in the utilities industry.

* * * *

Senator Nye expects a priority in dealing with munitions control legislation, but he might as well realize now that he will have expert competition from Bernard M. Baruch, in charge of President Rooseveelt's war profits committee. Baruch not only thought of it first—some 15 years ago—but as chairman of the War Industries Board he had considerable experience in getting priority for the things he needs.

(Associated Press.)

An overwhelming majority for continuance of the Bankhead cotton control act was recorded yesterday in early returns from the 16 States where producers of the staple voted on whether to retain the compulsory measure in 1935.

Two-thirds of the cotton growers who vote must favor application of the act next year or it will be scrapped. On the basis of the first reports, however, the proponents of the compulsion appeared to have won their fight with ballots to spare. Many regarded the topheavy vote significant of farmer feeling toward compulsory crop control in general.

An early unofficial report from four counties in the vicinity of Charlotte, N. C., showed 855 votes for continuance and only 8 opposed.

Overwhelming Trend.

The majority was even larger in Dallas County, Ala., home State of Senator John B. Bankhead, who was responsible for the legislation which aims at production control through a tax on all cotton grown in excess of a total allotment—10,400,000 bales for 1934. The Dallas compilation showed 697 to 3 against.

Other early returns, inconclusive but all showing the same overwhelming trend, were: A majority of approximately 9 to 1 in southeast Missouri; in Clarke County, Ga., 133 votes for and 8 against at noon; Shellman, Ga., 120 for, none against; a 10-to-1 vote for continuance in Carrollton, Ga.; 95 per cent of the voters in 15 of Anderson County's 21 poling places in favor.

And so the story went on in other sections.

Here, as the vote progressed, Senator Bankhead went to the White House carrying two good-luck pieces—a chestnut and a rabbit's foot. He showed them to the President with the comment that he was "hoping and praying" for a favorable vote for his measure.

Not Surprised Here.

All bona fide cotton producers were eligible to vote, the election being held under the auspices of the county control committees which helped administer the measure this year. Negroes were reported voting freely, and in Georgia one commented "We don't vote much, but we likes to."

Pending more complete returns they declined to be quoted for publication. One official said, however, he was confident the South would have ratified the first compulsory crop-control law even without President Roosevelt's promise to aid the small growers.

Officials do not expect complete official returns until early next week.

Plans for carrying forward the combined voluntary and compulsory cotton production program meanwhile were dusted off to bring the Administration's goal of a 12,000,000-bale crop next year. Actual production from 28,000,000 acres this year was 9,700,000 bales, well under the Bankhead law limit. The Administration plans for 34,000,000 acres to be under cultivation next year.

ware, and Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, will champion the "old line" demands for a New Deal attack, while Borah and Nye will press for more liberalism. No action taken by the conference will be binding on the minority's entire field.

"It is the clear duty of Republicans to constructively criticize," Dickinson declared yesterday. "If unsound legislative proposals are offered, they must be condemned. It will not oppose a sound liberal program, although it is my opinion we are paying too heavily for 18 months' experimentation in relief and reform—mostly reform."

He suggested Republicans could well get together on the following points:

Stripping "bureau chiefs" of the power to render decisions with the force and effect of law.

Determination of Republican policies first, and selection of official personnel afterward, to safeguard the party from a trend toward "a one-man show."

359 Eggs in a Year.

Medford, Oreg. (U.P.).—Lady May, a white Leghorn hen owned by Mrs. R. E. Carley, North Pacific Highway, Route 2, Medford, has laid 359 eggs in 365 days, a record surpassed only by a New Zealand black Orpington, which has a record of 361 eggs in 1930.

Shortly afterward, the Usworth sent another message:

"Please try man boats, as impossible fling any more lines—coils being washed away—crew worked out."

Picking up the words the Black Gull sent an offer of assistance to the Cunard Ascania, rapidly approaching the disabled vessel. "Thanks," replied the Ascania. "Doing everything possible. Very bad weather."

The Usworth, a 3,500-ton ship, belongs to the Dalgliesh Steam Shipping Co., of New Castle, England. The ship sailed from Montreal early in December and soon after ran into the storm which many skippers have pronounced the worst on the North Atlantic in their recollection.

Ossie Bluege Will Play Santa At Church Toy Fund Party

Baseball Star to Bring Own Donation to Aid Needy Children.

Ossie Bluege, third baseman of the Washington Senators, is going to put on a red coat atnd pinch hit Sunday afternoon for good old Santa Claus.

Stroking his beard as he hits a home run in the name of the Yule log, the full stocking and Christmas, Mr. Bluege will do his pinch hitting at The Washington Post Toy Fund party to be given by the young people's division of the Calvary Baptist Church, at Eighth and H streets northwest, from 5 p. m. until 7 p. m.

He will bring with him his own donation of toys, for which he has been shopping industriously for several days. When the party is over The Post Toy Fund will be much richer. Each of the 200 members of the division is prepared to pay his admission.

The entertainment will be diverse. It will consist of a concert by George Small's one-man band, cornet solos by Miss Wilmette Harmon and a chalk talk by Cleo Harris.

Sunshine Club Helps.

Members of the Sunshine Club, one of the first circles of the young people organized to help The Post Toy Fund this year, brought in their donations yesterday. They included dolls, games and books and fascinating mechanical toys. The president, Emily Rose Haas, said: "We are giving the toys to the poor children of Washington so that they too can have a happy Christmas. We who have clothing, food and shelter want to help those who otherwise would not have Christmas gifts."

Merry groups of Washington Toy Fund workers are anticipating the Toy Fund motion-picture party which will begin at 9 a. m. at R. K. O.-Keith's, December 22. The admission price will be a new toy for the Toy Fund and all boys and girls in Washington are invited. The Boys' Band will play outside the theater while the boys and girls are arriving and will give a concert at the opening of the entertainment.

Family Is Destitute.

"A mother and seven hungry children," a kind neighbor wrote to the Post Toy Fund, "will have no Christmas toys or perhaps no Christmas food of any kind unless someone helps them. The ages of the children run from three to sixteen years. I have not given anything but a few toys to the Post Toy fund, because I have two children myself. I would like somebody to help me make the family happy for Christmas."

"My daddy only gets nine dollars a week and we don't expect much," a little girl nine years old wrote. "But I am so anxious that the other children have a nice Christmas. They are my sisters, age seven and three. We would like some warm gloves as our hands get so cold every time we go out, but of course we would be glad to have anything. My baby sister would like to have a wagon so we can take her for a ride. I will be a very good girl and help mother, so please tell Dear Santa Claus to come to our house."

Another small "mother" wrote: "I hope Santa Claus will not forget to come to our house. My father has no work and there is no money to buy toys. We would be thankful for anything. My brother is five and my other brother is ten and my sister is eleven and I am eleven."

also connected with numerous other utility interests which would be affected by the proposed St. Lawrence River power development. He would make no statement as he left the White House yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt conferred on Wednesday with Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, a holding company for properties which almost surround the TVA, and with Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Co. Others he has seen include Director Lilienthal of the TVA, and Clarence E. Groesbeck, chairman of Electric Bond & Share Co.

Out of these meetings has come the intimation that the utility industry is seeking to intercept, or at least ease, the blow it feels is coming by offering to work toward giving more electricity for the same money. This would be done by "promotional rates," which move progressively lower as consumption mounts.

Consolidated Aircraft Gets Order From China

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Consolidated Aircraft Corporation has received an order from the Chinese government for 30 complete model 10 planes and 20 complete sets of parts, aggregating $243,000.

This brings the total orders received by the corporation within the past week up to $2,500,000, announcement by the company said.

2 Working on Hangar Hurt in Scaffold Fall

Two metal workers were hurt yesterday in the collapse of a scaffold on which they were working in the construction of the airship hangar at Washington Airport.

The men, Edward Claypool, of 1822 L street northwest, and Hyman Sacks, 745 Princeton place northwest, suffered sprains and bruises. They fell about 12 feet.

Martha Brown, Of Scottsville, Dies in Atlanta

Mrs. Benjamin Hewitt Is Buried in Maryland; Mrs. Horst Passes.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Mrs. Martha L. Bdown, a native of Scottsville, Albemarle County, died Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Will Cates, in Atlanta, Ga., after a long illness.

Mrs. Brown, before her marriage, was Miss Martha Lee Briggs, of Scottsville. She was married to William Brown, who for years conducted a mercantile business in Richmond. Later the family returned to Scottsville and lived for a while on the Alandale farm. Several years ago Mr. and Mrs. Brown went to Atlanta to make their home with their daughter, Mr. Brown's death occurring soon afterward.

Besides Mrs. Cates, Mrs. Brown is survived by a son, Jennings Brown, and a number of grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Hewitt's Funeral Held.

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Emily Blanch Hewitt, 57, wife of Benjamin Hewitt, of Valley Lee, at St. George's Church there, the Rev. J. Bernard officiating.

She is survived by her husband and eight children, five girls and three boys, all residents of St. Marys County.

Mrs. J. E. Horst Succumbs.

Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon in the Lutheran Church for Mrs. Rebecca Fitz Horst, 50, widow of Jacob E. Horst, who died yesterday of complications. She had been critically ill for the last three weeks.

Surviving are two daughters, Margaret, at home, and Mrs. A. C. Foot, Baltimore; four brothers and one sister.

Charles A. Stine Dead.

Greencastle, Pa., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Chares A. Stine, 88, former resident here, who died Tuesday at the home of his son, Clyde A. Stine, in Dallas Center, Iowa.

John H. Patterson.

Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held tomorrow for John H. Patterson, 89, who died near here yesterday after an illness of two years.

Mr. Patterson was a native of Washington County, Md., and was one of the few remaining charcoal burners of this section.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. W. H. Wangonhouser, with whom he made his home; a son, George, of Waynesboro, and an adopted son, Charles Patterson, of Washington.

Winchester Maps Housing Program

$157,451 Outlay Involved in Modernization Plans.

Winchester, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—A modernization program involving expenditure of $157,451 is expected to be under way soon as a result of a better housing campaign just concluded, according to Clifford D. Grim, who directed a canvass of property owners of the city. The objective of the campaign was set at $100,000.

Of the total funds to be expended, it is estimated that only $50,500 will be borrowed under the Federal Housing Act and at a meeting of representatives of banks, it was said that 90 per cent of the loan applications will be accepted without delay.

Builders predict there will be a shortage in labor of this type during the spring as a result of the campaign just closed. During the winter it is proposed to complete as much of the program as possible. Arthur M. Field has served as general chairman of the committee.

Champion Maryland Refrainer Is Coming Here for Christmas

Simon Peter Crone, 75, to End Many Long Records of 'Things Undone.'

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Brunswick, Md., Dec. 14.—Simon Peter Crone's going on a spree. He's going to break a lifelong—75 years—series of abstinences which has included refraining from leaving Brunswick, riding street cars, crossing the Potomac River, dropping into a movie and similar inquities.

Simon Peter's coming to Washington for the Christmas holidays.

Simon Peter gazed pensively at the Potomac, whose opposite banks he knows by sight only. He "reckoned" he'd have a good time. He "reckoned" he was entitled to it. But when he was asked what he expected to do in the Capital, he just stood there, looking out onto the gleaming water, out toward the bridge a few blocks away upon which he has yet to set foot.

Simon Peter, Old Simon they call him here, was born in Middletown. He came to Brunswick at the age of 15, and never left.

Here are some of the things Old Simon never has done:

He has never lived more than a mile from town, never gone into the mountains, never talked until he was 21 years old, never rode in a taxi or trolley car, never rode in a boat, never attended a movie, a prize fight, a wedding, a baseball game, a football game.

A department store, a hospital, a sweetheart (his own, that is), a building more than four stories high, a sailboat, a steamship, an airplane on the ground.

Some one told Old Simon today that from the Washington Monument people looked like ants.

"We'll see," he said.

Driven From D.C., Starlings Crowd Richmond Trees

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Richmond needs some tin-pan-beaters because starlings have invaded Capitol Square and are making State employes unhappy. In Washington last week 50 FERA workers were employed at 40 cents an hour to make a clatter and frighten the birds out of the sycamores along Pennsylvania avenue. It now seems some of the Washington birds have flown down to Richmond in search of peace and quiet.

The magnolias are full of them most of the day.

Nice Proposes To Aid College

Names Board to Study Plan for a Negro University.

Baltimore, Dec. 14 (AP).—A commission to report to the Legislature two years hence on the feasibility of the State's taking over Morgan College, now a privately conducted Negro institution, and expanding it into a university, was announced today by Governor-elect Harry W. Nice.

Judge Morris A. Soper, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals was named chairman of the committee. Other members are:

Rabbi William Rosenau, Dr. David A. Robertson, president of Goucher College; Dr. Arthur K. Lovejoy, of the Johns Hopkins University faculty; Ivan McDougle, of the Goucher faculty; Carl J. Murphy, Negro, editor of the Afro-American; the Rev. John W. Haywood, dean of Morgan College; Francis M. Wood, Negro, director of colored schools of Baltimore; William A. C. Hughes, jr., Negro, attorney, and Dr. B. M. Rehtta, Negro, physician.

In a statement with his announcement ,the Governor-elect said Maryland was one of the few Southern States that had not provided higher educational facilities for Negro youth.

"The Republican Party," he said, "has pledged itself to remedy this deficiency in our scheme of education."

Coast Guard Chief Addresses Banquet

Sixth District Personnel Hosts at Salisbury.

Salisbury, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Rear Admiral H. G. Hamlet, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, was the guest speaker at a banquet of the Sixth District Coast Guard personnel here this evening. About 150 Coast Guardsmen from stations extending from Lewes, Del., to Cape Charles, Va., attended.

Commander C. J. Sullivan, district commandant, with headquarters at Chincoteague, Va., expressed the hope a banquet of similar character will be held annually.

The guests included United States Senator John G. Townsend, jr., and former Representative G. Houston, of Delaware; Representative T. Alan Goldsborough and State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., of Maryland; Commander R. R. Wasche, Washington, aid to Rear Admiral Hamlet; Capt. T. G. Crapster, Staten Island, N. Y., chief inspector of the Eastern area; Commander O. M. Maxton, chief of division operations; Commander Edward Thompson, officer in charge of construction and repair for the fourth fifth and sixth districts, and Capt. Weightman, commandant of the Norfolk district.

Carson Continues Prison Labor Fight

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Chairman William E. Carson today wound up a circuit of the State with members of the conservation and development commission, asserting land values of tens of millions of dollars could be restored and created by the use of State prisoners for mosquito eradication, tide control and wasteland rehabilitation in Virginia.

Mr. Carson's statement today followed closely upon his recent entry into the controversy over the use of prisoners on highways.

He said it is practical as well as economical to use convict labor in conservation enterprises and that the first objective of such a program should be eradication of the mosquito from the tidewater areas.

Trades Council Maps Legislative Program

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Tentative plans for legislation to be introduced in the Maryland Assembly were discussed at a meeting of the legislative committee of the Allegany Trades Council last night, John Burgess presided.

The labor organization plans to cover unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, child labor, anti-injunction or "yellow dog" statute, restriction of prison-made goods and revised mining laws to include persons employed in clay mines. Recovery legislation patterned after New York laws, will also be considered.

76 Pass Exams For Virginia Bar

Less Than 50 Per Cent of Applicants Successful.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Seventy-six applicants to the State bar passed the examination given here this week by the State board of bar examiners, Secretary Maury B. Watts reported today.

The successful applicants represented less than 50 per cent of the record-breaking class of 188 which took the examination. Passage of the examination permits the successful candidates to practice law in Virginia.

The next semiannual examination will be more difficult under new provisions of the law as it was amended by the 1934 General Assembly.

New Plant Due For Winchester

Special Finishing Process for Ash and Walnut to Be Employed.

Winchester, Dec. 14 (Spl.).—The economic clouds lifted slightly here today with the announcement of P. W. Plumly, of Barnesville, Ohio, that a lumber company he heads expects to open a branch plant here for finishing, by a special process, ash and walnut lumber. The industry, in addition to providing employment for 50 persons, will provide a source of revenue for farmers and others who wish to market walnut logs.

The plant is expected to be in production by the last of next week, Mr. Plumly said, and will be in operation continuously. A three-year lease has been effected for the property where preparations are being rushed for installation of the equipment.

Concurrently with this announcement, it was learned that officials of the Kieckeffer Container Co., of Delair, N. J., purchaser of the Shenandoah Boxboard Co.'s paper mill here for a figure reputed to be $225,000, have been conducting a survey of industries here and in other Valley cities to determine whether there will be a demand for containers.

The paper mill was closed down after the sale was completed and officials announced it would be closed for at least a month. It was learned today the representatives of the new owners declared themselves pleased with the results of their survey. Persons in touch with the situation are hopeful steps will be taken for an early resumption of production.

If the manufacture of containers such as are made in New Jersey is introduced at the plant, it will mean the building of a new unit, representatives of the Kieckheffer Container Co. said while here some weeks ago.

Mrs. Buccolo Set Free by Verdict

Wife Fires Six Shots.

In a frenzy lest he repeat one of his many assaults upon her, Mrs. Buccolo reached into a drawer, seized the pistol, and fired six bullets into his body. Afterwards, she removed a cover from the bed and draped it over the body.

Mrs. Buccolo, taking the stand in her own defense, said she did not know how she shot her husband. She said that when he advanced towards her she became dazed.

For the Government, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and his assistant, Julian Richards, called the shooting a cold-blooded, premeditated murder. They exhibited Buccolo's coat, showing a bullet hole in the back, around which there was a dark splotch.

This argument was countered by George D. Horning and Rudolph Yeatman with the contention that Mrs. Buccolo, even though she shot her husband once in the back, had done so in the fear that Buccolo, who had often boasted he would kill her, was about to make good his threat.

They pointed out that the defense had shown repeated assaults on Mrs. Buccolo, and several witnesses said they had heard Buccolo threaten to kill his wife. On one occasion he drove his automobile in which his wife and her mother were riding into a street car at Fifth street and Massachusetts avenue. Both passengers were hurt and when Buccolo was chided he informed his wife he was only "taking her where she wanted to go."

$25,000 for Mrs. Ulm Is Voted in Australia

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 14 (AP).—The House of Representatives passed a bill today making a grant of £5,000 (approximately $25,000), to Mrs. Charles T. P. Ulm, whose husband has been missing for ten days on a transpacific flight.

Although Ulm carried £5,000 in life insurance, supporters of the measure said this would be needed to settle his liabilities. The flight was sponsored by the government. The measure was sent to the Senate for action.

First Lady Is Offered a Jumbo, But She Declines, 'Thank You'

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is shown above as she shopped in Kann's department store's toy department yesterday. She selects most of her gifts throughout the year, but there are a few little things the grandchildren might like. John L. Johns is playing Santa.

Buys a Doll, However, and Has Picture Taken With Santa.

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt doesn't want any elephants.

So Santa Claus learned yesterday when he picked up a toy jumbo from a department store counter and proferred it to a Christmas-shopping First Lady.

"No elephants today, thank you," she smiled.

She bought a doll, posed with Santa for a picture and that ended her shopping tour.

Later, she warned relief workers against too much verbal probing into the private lives of relief clients.

Looking around a Red Cross conference table where sat Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and 30 other women notables of the National Volunteer Service Committee, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"The people who are coming on relief today are people like you and myself, who never expected to have to accept relief. They are not poor, worthless creatures, but the finest in our country."

To these people who have "used every resource of savings and credit," applying for relief "crucifies pride and whips morale," she said, and "it is an added hardship to have to submit to the questions of the untrained worker, who may ask about personal matters which the trained worker would know through observation."

Mrs. Roosevelt complimented the Red Cross committee for its civilian home service courses training volunteer social workers.

Senator McAdoo Goes To Philippine Hospital

Manila, P. I., Dec. 14 (AP).—Senator William Gibbs McAdoo of California, is suffering from "an irritation of the intestinal tract" and will remain under observation in the army hospital here several days, physicians said tonight.

The Senator was stricken yesterday while on a flight from Manila to Iloilo in connection with a Senatorial ivnestigation of Philippines independence act terms, and was flown back here for treatment today.

Beef Given to Needy.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Orders for 10,000 cans of cooked beef, furnished by the Federal Government, have been distributed among families on relief rolls in Franklin County, Theodore Wilcox, area supervisor of relief, announced today.

Prizes Offered At Grain Show

Improved Crop Program to Open Today at Manassas.

Manassas, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.). The Prince William Corn and Grain Show will be held at Conner's Hall in Manassas, tomorrow.

The premium list provides awards for field and ensilage corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, orchard grass seed and lespedeza hay classes.

The premiums offered, such as certified seed corn, free treating and cleaning of small seed grain, approved seed treating materials, soil testing outfits, and many others are of a nature that will tend to further crop improvement.

Farmers have been asked to bring their exhibits to Conner's Hall not later than 10:00 a.m.

S. F. Grubbs, fieldman for the Virginia Crop Improvement Association, will speak on the subject of "Crop Improvement." James W. Godkin, extension plant pathologist, will discuss measures for crop disease control.

Grubbs will judge the exhibits and hold a review of the placing of classes.

Culbertson Would Play Bridge to Settle Suit

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Ely Culbertson replied tonight to Vincent F. Boland's threatened $200,000 damage suit for alleged conspiracy to "throttle" the Boland system of contract bridge with a promise to pay the sum—on his own conditions.

"Mr. Boland does not have to sue me," Culbertson said. "I will pay him $200,000 if he only agrees to use the Boland club in a five-year match at $1 a point."

Father Coughlin Gets Two Traffic Tickets

Detroit, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of the Shrine of the Little Flower, today had two traffic tickets to appear in court at Ferndale Monday to answer charges of speeding and operating a car without a drivers' license.

He posted collateral of $15.

Father Coughlin said he was hurrying to keep an appointment. The speeding ticket charged 50 miles an hour on a 35-mile highway.

Maryland Briefs

(Associated Press.)

Elkton—Joseph Vignault, 60, gardener on an estate near Perryville, Md., was sentenced to six months in the house of correction in circuit court here for shooting a 16-year-old Perryville High School boy who attempted to pick a pear on the estate. Vignault used a shotgun loaded with bird shot, one pellet of which struck the boy in the temple. The youth recovered.

Salisbury—Drainage of two sections of Salisbury as a part of the mosquito control program will begin here soon with FERA labor. The mayor and city council have agreed to finish supervision for the project and to supply the smaller implements to be used in the work.

Frederick—Fire loss in Frederick City and County from January 1, 1934, through the current month is estimated at $118,000—an amount which has been exceeded in the city and county only twice in the last ten years. Loss in the city was set at $28,500 and in the county, $90,000. An increase in fire alarms and incendiary fires also was noted.

Elkton—Glen Morris, 19, colored, of Connecticut, who attempted to hold up a filling station proprietor at North East, Md., near here two weeks ago, was sentenced to two years in the house of correction for the crime. Morris used a toy pistol in the hold-up.

Leonardtown—Capt. Fred McWilliams, of Dynard, and George Chorporis, of St. Patrick's Creek, landed a 15-pound rock fish in the lower Potomac. The fish fought so vigorously that it took the efforts of both men to pull it into the boat.

Rev. Addison H. Groff Heads Religious Council

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.). The Rev. Addison H. Groff was elected president of the Washington County Council of Religious Education at the annual meeting held here.

Other officers elected are: Vice president, Elmer E. Snyder; secretary, Miss Bertha M. Negley; statistical secretary and treasurer, Miss Lilah C. Ross; superintendent of children's division, Mrs. Norman S. Snively; superintendent of young people's division, Mrs. J. R. Laughlin; leadership training, Miss Ruth M. Dotterer; superintendent of adult division, the Rev. E. Holdcraft; week day religious education, Miss Cecile Cutelius.

New Bible School Will Be Dedicated

Nondenominational Chapel Ready at New Salem.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—The first nondenominational Bible School chapel in Washington County and believed to be the only one in western Maryland will be dedicated at New Stalem, near here, Sunday.

The chapel was started by Frank Welty and his daughter, Miss Pauline Welty. The first class consisted of 20 children, who were unable to attend Sunday School elsewhere, and this membership, which has grown to 75, forced the sponsors to seek new quarters.

R. Paul Smith, Hagerstown, will be the principal speaker.

Police Tie-up With Adjoining States Is Urged

Compact With Maryland and Virginia Seen Crime War Need.

A compact among the District of Columbia and Maryland and Virginia, designed to link the law enforcement units of the three, may grow out of Attorney General Cummings' conference on crime.

Relations between the District and the two States which adjoin it are now most cordial, a circumstance illustrated by the fact that the local police radio station willingly broadcasts information for Maryland and Virginia authorities.

It is believed, however, that a formal compact such as was recommended to all States by the crime conference would do much to facilitate the running down of criminals who flee from one jurisdiction to another.

Favors Compact.

There have been many outstanding crimes where joint action was necessary. The murder of Barney McBride, an Oklahoma oil man, was an example. His butchered body was found near Meadows, Md., but the killing undoubtedly was conceived in the District.

The same might be said of the murder of Mary Baker, whose body was found in nearby Virginia. The latest example was the killing of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route man, who was shot down in Takoma Park, Md., just across the District line. There is little doubt but that the gunmen planned the killing in Washington.

In all such cases Washington detectives go into Maryland and Virginia only by invitation.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett said yesterday that he thought any plan that would bring about better cooperation between the District and Maryland and Virginia would be a "very good idea." He confessed, however, that he had no specific plan in mind.

Likes Four Points.

Following President Roosevelt's appeal for a "tying together" of Federal, State and local enforcement agencies, Gordon Dean, a special attorney of the Department of Justice, had this to say to the crime conference:

"Specifically, just what can be accomplished by cooperative effort of a number of States that can not be be accomplished by any one single State?

"I would like to call your attention to four principal fields in which compacts might profitably be utilized. They are (1) the arrest of persons who have fled from one State to another by pursuing officers of the first State; (2) the return of witnesses who have crossed State lines but who are essential to the prosecution of a criminal case in the State from which they have fled; (3) the establishment by two or more States of joint agencies, such as crime detection agencies, such as laboratories, or joint police units; (4) the supervision of persons in one State who have been paroled or granted probation in another State."

Huge Munitions Profits Disputed

cellation of several previously signed contracts, one of which, testimony brought out, would have netted the company more than $40,000,000. Harris said this was critical period of the war.

Nye termed the negotiations "haggling" for profits by the du Ponts, and asserted the disclosure was the most important revelation of the inquiry. The du Ponts repeatedly dnied responsibility for the delay, which committee members charged impeded the Government in the prosecution of the war.

In the matter of the Old Hickory plant, no sooner had Hiss stated what he claimed to be the profit figure, than Irene du Pont leaped to his feet and angrily challenged the estimate of percentage of return on investment. The contract with the Government had been carried out through a subsidiary company capitalized at $5,000.

Minutes Offered.

"The return to the company bears no relation to the $5,000," he asserted.

"Weren't the profits paid in dividends to the stockholders?" Hiss asked.

The investigator produced minutes of a meeting of the board of directors of the subsidiary, showing dividends of $80 a share were declared in 1919 and remarked that the original subscription had been $1 a share.

"If we had used $1,000 for the company," said Irenee du Pont, "I suppose we would have made an even bigger return on the investment. I think we made a bad mistake in overcapitalizing it."

du Pont went on to compare the profit to a physician's fee, who, he said, would have no funds invested. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, interposed an assertion, however, that the payment was in the nature of a service fee "and didn't invove any financial risk."

Disputes Statement.

"I dispute that statement," said Irenee.

There was a 'potential risk," he said, in the subsidiaries dealing with other contractors. Vandenberg acknowledged the existence of a "collateral lability," but said that in comparison "with the whole show" it was exceedingly limited.

Later the committee took note of a letter from Ogden Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, asserting that the committee in listing war-time million dollar incomes evidently had confused him with his father. His own income, at that time, he said, was $138,000 a year. He asserted, too, that his father's money had not come from activities connected with the war.

Nye's only statement was, "There has been no implication that the million-dollar class was connected with the munitions business."

Latins Mourn Quixotic Poet Slain in Chile

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Spanish-speaking world today mourned Jose Santos Chocano, self-styled "Singer of America" and hero of innumerable quixotic exploits, as police held his slayer incommunicado.

Though Peruvian born, the 59-year-old poet considered himself citizen of all Latin lands, and tonight his relatives, declaring Chilean and Peruvian soil not worthy of his body, considered Mexico and Cuba as places for his burial.

A fantastic story that Santos Chocano had defrauded him of his share in the ancient treasure of the Incas they had discovered together, was told by the slayer, Charles Bruce, to explain why he stabbed the poet twice last night aboard a crowded street car in Santiago's fashionable district.

Authorities questioned that story, however, intimating Bruce's sanity might be tested. The slayer talked windily to reporters last night, before he was placed in seclusion, about the buried treasure he said he had located.

Many literary critics considered Chocano the greatest poet of his time writing in the Spanish language. But more than his verse, his stormy fiction-like career had put him in the public eye.

Many Latin governments honored him. Others jailed or deported him. Former King Alfonso of Spain once interceded to save his life after an overturn of the government he supported in Guatemala placed him in the shadow of the gallows. Mexico kicked him out after his friend, Francisco Madero, was slain, and he became an agent in the United States for Pancho Villa and Venustiano Carranza.

Life Sentence For Patricide

Hudgins, 22, Is Adjudged 'Feeble-Minded' but Not Insane.

Newport News, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Chester W. Hudgins, 22, charged with the slaying of his father, John W. Hudgins, Mathews County oysterman, on November 19, today was sentenced to life imprisonment at a brief trial before Judge J. Boyd Sears at Mathews Court House.

Young Hudgins entered a plea of guilty and, upon the recommendation of Commonwealth's Attorney W. M. Minter, was given a life term.

Dr. George W. Brown, superintendent of the Eastern State Hospital, and a member of the governor's medical board, testified that Hudgins was "definitely feeble-minded," but was not insane.

Officers said Hudgins fatally wounded his father after the latter refused to meet his demand for money.

questioned Goolrick, "which you now say indicate arsenic poisoning, yet none of you doctors became suspicious?"

"That is the truth, sir," Dr. Cole replied.

"Why did you not suspect that something was wrong?" asked Goolrick.

"If I had not been in a home in which I have such confidence, I possibly would have been suspicious."

"You acted entirely on what the nurses told you, didn't you. That is, you never actually saw Mr. Bell tampering with food or medicine?"

"No, sir."

The defense continued to emphasize Mr. Bell's failure to resent the actions of his associates in seeking his prosecution when Cole stated on cross-examination that Bell had shown "no difference in attitude" toward him after the arrest October 10.

That Mrs. Bell in a moment of emotional stress told Dr. Cole "she wanted to die," was brought out as Cole told of Bell's bad temper on one occasion since February.

"What attitude did Mr. Bell have toward his wife during her illness of this year?" Bryan asked.

Display of Temper.

"On one occasion I remember a display of bad temper. I was in the Bell yard and saw Mr. Bell emerge from the house. His lips were tightly drawn, his face was tight, his jaw set. I would say he was mad. I looked at his wife. She was slumped over, sobbing.

"'I want to die,' she told me. 'I've done the best I can. I want to die.'"

Dr. Cole substantiated the testimony of Mrs. Viola Jones and Miss Ruth Hill, nurses to Mrs. Bell, regarding the alleged attempts of Mr. Bell to poison food and the "traps" the nurses said were set for the elderly churchman. He told of inspecting the assertedly contaminated meat juice and beef, and of directing the laying of the traps.

As court opened this morning, Rebecca Burrus, colored, Bell cook, told of having seen the defendant "sprinkle powder" on a salad, a plate of chicken and a grapefruit intended for Mrs. Bell.

Bryan Questions Cook.

"Did you ever see Mr. Bell do anything to food, Becky?" Bryan asked.

"Yes, sir; I saw him sprinkle some kind of powder on a salad that was supposed to go to Mrs. Bell," the cook replied.

"Did you ever see him tampering with anything else?"

"Yes, sir; I saw him sprinkle powder on some chicken."

"What did you do?"

"I just left it there."

"Did you ever see Mr. Bell at the frigidaire?"

"Yes, sir; I saw him shaking the meat juice bottle."

"How many times did you see him, Becky?"

"I saw him shaking the meat juice twice."

"Do you know anything about grapefruit being tampered with?"

"Yes, sir; I saw him put some powder on Mrs. Bell's grapefruit."

Butzner on cross-examination emphasized the witness' testimony that Bell apparently made no attempt at secrecy while allegedly doctoring the foods.

"Mr. Bell did all this sprinkling right openly, didn't he, Becky?" Butzer asked.

"Yes, sir," she replied.

"He made no effort to conceal it?"

"No, sir."

Butzner fired a succession of questions as to whom she had told of the poisoning. The cook said she had mentioned nothing of what she saw because she was "afraid to say anything."

Tells of Purchases.

W. A. Williams, president of a Richmond wholesale dry goods company, testified that a quantity of rugs and furnishings, valued at $51.04, were delivered by his company to Mrs. McMullin and charged to the Bell furniture store in Fredericksburg.

Bell's connections with an "unknown Richmond woman" again were brought out in this morning's session when Oliver Morrison, Fredericksburg, another former Bell employe, testified that Bell had asked him to shadow and report on the activities of a Richmond woman who was vacationing at Buckroe Beach, Va.

"What did Mr. Bell say in your converstaion with him?" Bryan asked Morrison.

"He asked if I was doing anything next week. I told him I wasn't sure whether I would be working the next week or not."

"Did Mr. Bell say anything more to you?"

"Yes, sir; he asked me if I would go down to Buckroe Beach and watch out for a party for a fellow."

"What sort of a party?"

"A lady."

"How were you to know this woman?"

Report of Photograph.

"He said he would give me a photograph of her."

"When you saw him later and said you couldn't go, did he urge you in any way?"

"Yes, sir; he said he wanted to do a friend a favor, and asked me to help him as a personal favor to him."

"Did he say who the friend was?"

"No, sir."

"What were you to do at the beach?"

"Find out where she went and what she did, and write a report to Mr. Bell every other night."

Mrs. McMullin was called to the witness stand when court convened after noon recess. Under the intent stares of 300 spectators who occupied every available space in the courtroom for the preceding hour, she took the stand and prepared to answer Bryan's questions. She was smartly attired in a brown, high-necked dress, a brown Princess Marina hat, and brown accessories. She was wearing a fur coat.

"Do you know the defendant?" she was asked by Bryan.

"Yes," answered Mrs. McMullin.

"How long have you known him?"

"About three years."

"During your acquaintance with him, did you receive money from him?"

"Yes," replied the witness after a moment's hesitation.

"Were you at Buckroe Beach this past summer?"

"Yes, I was."

Defense counsel waived cross-examination.

Reports that Miss Irma Bell, daughter of the defendant, originally summoned as a prosecution witness, would be unable to appear were disproven today when Judge Coleman announced he had conversed with Miss Bell's attendants in New York and that Miss Bell would appear Monday. The young woman has been ill. Attorney Bryan said today he did not expect to call Miss Bell but reserved the right to place her on the stand as a rebuttal witness.

Chemist on Stand.

Carrol Rager, chemist at the Sylvania Industrial Corporation here, said he had discussed poisoning with Mr. Bell in a conversation two months ago. He was questioned at length by Bryan and Goolrick on a statement assertedly made by Bell that "arsenic is put on corn to kill crows."

He said he and Bell had discussed methods of removing poisons from liquor manufactured from corn.

"What did you say after Mr. Bell mentioned the arsenic," queried Bryan.

"I said that if arsenic didn't kill them, potassium cyanide would finish them off."

"What happened then?"

"Mr. Bell asked me to spell potassium cyanide."

On cross-examination, Goolrick asked Rager if Mr. Bell's allusion to crows excited his curiosity.

"No," replied the chemist. "He said some farmers had mentioned it to him."

Poison From Liquor.

"Weren't you discussing the possibility of removing poison from liquor?"

"Yes. We discussed it concerning getting a license for a still. I talked with you about the same thing."

Among the witnesses who will testify for the defense are John F. Gouldman, jr., bank cashier; Benjamin T. Pitts, motion picture theater operator; W. J. Tinder, boarding house proprietor; C. A. Costen, Suffolk, Va., banker; W. E. Cohoon, Suffolk attorney; J. E. Tingley, of Stafford County, and Thomas Harding, Fredericksburg.

Defense attorneys declined to name any other witnesses who will testify in Bell's behalf.

Truck Owner, Car Line Named in $50,000 Suit

A suit for $50,000 damages against the Capital Transit Co. and the Van E. Thompson Co. was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by William C. Butler, 3917 Kansas avenue northwest.

Butler charged he was standing at Seventh and C streets southwest last June when a truck belonging t othe Thompson Co. and a street car collided, with the result that the truck went up on the sidewalk and hit him. He suffered severe injuries, Attorney James S. Easby-Smith asserted.

North Carolina Phone Rate Cut Is Ordered

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—The North Carolina Utilities Commission today ordered reductions in telephone subscriber rates at 58 exchanges of the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., effective January 1.

The commission estimated the reductions would mean an aggregate annual savings of $321,897.72 to 78,000 suscribers. Counsel for the telephone company indicated a court fight was planned against the reductions.

Cotton Factory Fined $750 in NRA Violation

Camden, N. J., Dec. 14 (AP).—The cotton garment manufacturing concern of Morvay & Son, Inc., Bridgeton, N. J., today was fined $750 on a charge of violating the national recovery act.

The fine was imposed by Federal Judge John Boyd Avis after the company changed its plea from not guilty to guilty. The company was indicted last October on charges of violating the NRA wage and working hours regulations.

Finland, Able, Is Glad to Pay Its War Debts

Is Only European Nation Sending Coin; Hungary Makes Deposit.

..Helsingfors, Finland, Dec. 14 (AP). Finland "promised to pay" the war debt she owes the United States, and she's paying—because "it's the only honest thing to do."

Thus Risto Ryti, quiet-spoken governor of the Bank of Finland, explained today his government's action in sending to the United States the $230,000 due this mid-month on the national war debt.

Finland will make formal payment on the amount tomorrow, the day the instalment comes due, although, Ryti said, she is well aware she may be the only nation to do so.

"It is only natural that we should," he said. "We signed a contract. We promised to pay. It's the ony honest thing to do."

Able and Glad to Pay.

yti, whose careful management of the Bank of Finland has steered the nation into financial clear waters, made it plain that he spoke only for Finland.

"Of Course, our debt is small," he said, "and, strictly speaking, it isn't a war debt.

"But we are able to pay and glad to pay. We see no reason why we should make an exception between our war debt to America and our other debts."

He turned then to speak of the war debt issue in general.

"It would stimulate confidence," he said, "if all nations paid. But I do believe it has become necessary for America to make some readjustments."

President Expects Eventual Settlement

(Associated Press.)

Despite that the United States will receive less than one cent on each twenty dollars due today from twelve European nations, President Roosevelt expressed belief yesterday that eventual settlement of the war debts would be had.

The President declined to say at his press conference on what he based his hope for future payment but said he most certainly did expect eventual settlement.

Eight nations already had officially informed the State Department that they would default. Three others were prepared to give similar notice. The eleven ower $629,893,716.

Finland, alone of the twelve debtor nations, informed the State Department that its instalment of $228,538 would be paid in cash to the New York Federal Reserve Bank today.

A parade of foreign envoys brought official tidings of the defaults during the day to William Phillips, Undersecretary of State. They reported that France, Italy, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Lithuania would not make the payments.

Great Britain and Belgium had previously informed this Government they would make no payments. Esthonia, Latvia and Rumania, were prepared to give similar notices.

The Hungarian government exit would be unable to pay because of "continued unfavorable economic conditions," but would deposit a certificate in Pengo equivalent to $49,771.93 in the Hungarian National Bank which will bear interest at 2 per cent until paid. There is as yet, no provision for future redemption of the certificates.

Rites Held for Mrs. Ridgely.

A memorial service was held yesterday at noon in the chapel of the Washington Cathedral for Mrs. John Rodgely, of Maryland, under the auspices of the Maryland committee of the National Cathedral, of which she was a member. Mrs. Ridgely was the daughter of the late Dr. J. Walker Humrichouse, of Hagerstown.

Garibaldi, the great Italian statesman and liberator, tells in his autobiography how he broke into print for the first time. He was 26 years old at the time and had already started his career, which often brought him in conflict with the law. He escaped from Genoa in February, 1834, in peasant dress, and a few days later had the thrill of seeing his name in print for the first time—it was a news story telling of his own death sentence.

He was condemned to death because of his part in an unsuccessful uprising in Genoa in which several of the young leaders of the liberation movement were participants. He went then to France, and later to South America, where he first won widespread fame as a leader of the new republic of Uruguay.

He returned to Italy again in 1848 to aid the Italians in an unsuccessful revolt against the Austrians. Eleven years later he again returned to Italy after visiting the United States and South America, this time to lead the successful revolution against foreign domination.

On the great flat plain of Nullarbor in Western and South Australia, about 100 miles inland from the southern coast, lies the longest straight railroad in the world. This line, connecting the east and the west of the continent, runs 300 miles through grazing lands without a single curve. From Kalgoorlie to Port Augusta it stretches more than 1,000 miles without crossing a river.

A British Poll Determines Surprising Ratings of Plays and Players Abroad

Many Reversals Appear in Toll Of Big Ballot

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

In its issue of Saturday, December 15, which is by way of being tomorrow, the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the motion picture trade journals, will publish the results of a comprehensive British box-office rating of pictures and players, both European and American.

This English survey, conducted by Sidney L. Bernstein, British exhibitor, in ten of the most representative theaters on his extensive circuit, has resulted in final compilations and rankings that are as replete with surprises as such cross-sections of mass public opinion usually are.

The rating of players expresses itself in a list of 50 actors and another list of an equal number of actresses. The Motion Picture Herald bases its comparative observations upon the first six rankings in each category. If examination of the top-ranking stars is made to include the first ten actors and the first ten actresses, the result would be something like this:

The British Ten Best.

The ten ranking actors, in British opinion as expressed in pounds and shillings at the ticket wickets, are:

1. George Arliss.
2. Clark Gable.
3. Wallace Beery.
4. Clive Brook.
5. Robert Montgomery.
6. Ronald Colman.
7. Jack Hulbert.
8. Lionel Barrymore.
9. Charles Laughton.
10. Tom Walls.

Correspondingly, the feminine favorites are:

1. Norma Shearer.
2. Marie Dressler.
3. Greta Garbo.
4. Kay Francis.
5. Marlene Dietrich.
6. Katharine Hepburn.
7. Gracie Fields.
8. Janet Gaynor.
9. Joan Crawford.
10. Claudette Colbert.

Among the surprises of this English point of view may be mentioned the submergence of Leslie Howard, Maurice Chevalier, John Barrymore, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Lionel Atwill and Dick Powell, to choose a few at random, to such low positions on the list of 50 as 15, 19, 30, 31, 40 and 44, respectively, with Douglas Fairbanks, sr., not even in the running.

On the distaff side it is a little unexpected to find Diana Wynyard, Mae West, Constance Bennett, Helen Hayes, Ruth Chatterton and Carole Lombard as far down the list as 13, 17, 22, 25, 34 and 42, in the order named.

It is evident that the ratings are not affected by any too rigid adherence to a strictly patriotic viewpoint. In each list, last place is occupied by a Britisher.

Other Conclusions.

The results of the poll reveal several important facts of public taste, in addition to the mere rating of plays and players. For instance, it has been determined that:

Adventure and musical comedy are the best liked types of productions.

More patrons attend the theater twice a week than do once a week.

Patrons want an organ solo as part of the program. (This probably would be found true in Washington, too, if it were ever put to an actual test.)

Double featuring is preferred by 84.5 per cent of the patronage.

A three-hour program suits the majority, but the next largest group preference is for a three-and-a-half-hour program.

Alexander Korda (who created no great furore when he was directing on this side) is the most favored director.

When polls like the present were made in 1928 and 1932 Ronald Colman headed the male list. In those years, Betty Balfour and Dolores Del Rio divided first honors for 1928 and Norma Shearer was undisputed first in 1932 among the female stars.

The comprehensiveness of the vote may be determined from the fact that of a total of 250,000 questionnaire blanks distributed, 124,837 were returned completely filled out.

The public having declined to respond to the manifold superiorities of "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head" with the enthusiasm which the merit of the picture richly deserves, announcement is made by the management of the RKO-Keith Theater that "Chu Chin Chow" will be the major screen attraction on Fifteenth street, beginning Sunday.

"Chu Chin Chow" is the Gaumont-British talking and singing version of the famous Oscar Asche operetta, based on the Arabian Nights tale of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves. It is a picture that has been reviewed in this country always as one of majestic proportions, enchanting music, exotic dances and a fantastic narrative of cruel bandits, love, romance and golden treasure that is a worthy successor to the stage production which ran five years in London and three in New York.

The camera treatment is said to mark the high point of English achievement in the development of photographic artistry.

"Chu Chin Chow" will be succeeded on Christmas Day by Katharine Hepburn in Sir James Matthew Barrie's "The Little Minister." So now you know.

That "Laburnum" Cast.

Latest among Mr. C. P. Greneker's intermittent barrage of isolated items relating to the imminent presentation of "Laburnum Grove" in the National Theater, under the joint auspices of the Messrs. Gilbert Miller and Lee Shubert, is the one to the effect that Melville Cooper and Margery Pickard, members of the original London cast of the J. B. Priestly play, have sailed from England aboard the Georgic to assume in the American production the roles which they created.

Edmund Gwenn, one of England's most distinguished actors, is sailing at the end of the week and will arrive in America a few days before the Washington opening of the play. Melville Cooper, like Mr. Gwenn, is a very well-known British actor, having played in a long list of dramatic productions as well as numerous revues.

"Laburnum Grove" marked Miss Pickard's first appearance on the London stage. For a year prior to this engagement, she appeared with a touring company. She is a member of a celebrated theatrical family.

That high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Washington divisional manager of Columbia Pictures, and Harry Brown, Santa Clauses for a day, have announced a "Pre-release Special Smoker" in the Willard next Monday night, December 17, at 8:30, to take the place of the usual Monday luncheon of the Variety Club of Washington. There will be gifts, prizes, donations, entertainment, food and other facilities for doing one's gratis Christmas shoplifting early.

A bulletin from Secretary Nat B. Brown—and what elegant initials they are!—also conveys the tidings that beginning in January one of these smokers will take the place of a luncheon the first Monday of each month—which is as good a way as any other to make certain that the associate members who are active on the dramatic desks of the local press, will not be present, Monday night being the customary opening night of all touring dramatic attractions.

Under this arrangement, the boys will be able to speak freely without fear of being quoted!

Dots and Dashes.

With the exception of Anna May Wong, to whom America can lay some claim, it is an all-English cast, by the way, that appears in "Chu Chin Chow," coming to RKO-Keith's on Sunday . . . Appearing in both "Limehouse Blues," at the Earle, and "Chu Chin Chow," Anna May will be prevalent locally for the first time in many blue moons . . . Or pink ones, either, for that matter . . . The International Brotherhood of Magicians, W. W. Durbin, president, will entertain the children at The Children's Village, Nebraska and Massachusetts avenues northwest, tonight at 7:30, with a complete magic show . . . Florence Hall, of the University of Maryland, pianist and singer, has been added to the troupe of hocus-pocus experts and will supply interludes of music . . . "Ein Gewisser Herr Gran," said to be an exciting detective story, picturized by Ufa, will be the feature of the Foreign Language Cinema presentation in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, tonight . . . The West Players will present "When the Sun Rises," a one-act play by Dorothy C. Allan, at Walter Reed Hospital next Wednesday night at 7 . . . Harry S. Weatherby is directing and playing the juvenile lead . . . Margaret Evans and Frank Manzuk complete the cast . . . "Molasses and January," "Pick and Pat," or whatever you want to call them, headlining this week on the Earle stage, were down for The Post's big anniversary broadcast from the Press Club Auditorium last June 11 . . . If you must call them by their right names, they are Pick Malone and Pat Padgett . . . And if they are as funny in their act as they were that daylight breakfast down at Tom O'Donnell's erster emporium, you'll be rolling in the aisle . . . And unless you are impervious to warmth of personality, the charm of a fine soprano voice and imposing stage presence, you will be groveling at the feet of Estelle Taylor at Loew's Fox, begining today, too . . . The Jewish Community Center Dramatic Society will present three one-act plays in the Center's Auditorium Sunday night at 8:15 . . . "Bait," one of the plays, was written by the players and will be acted for the first time on any stage . . . A benefit performance, featuring Joe E. Brown in "Son of a Sailor," an Our Gang comedy and a Walt Disney cartoon, will be given in the Takoma Theater by the Lions Club and the management next Wednesday at 3:30 . . . Admission will be by contribution of new articles of clothing, food and toys, to be distributed among the poor of Takoma Park and vicinity . . . For the tenth consecutive season, Henry Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man," will be given in Luther Place Memorial Church, on Thomas Circle, December 26, 27 and 28, by the chapel . . . Bess Davis Schreiner, as usual, is the sponsor of this splendid Yuletide enterprise . . . "The Tinker," Fred Eastman's appealing three-act play, will be given by the Dramatic Club of the Young People's Council of the National City Christian Church, tonight and tomorrow night in the Social Hall, 1308 Vermont avenue . . . I still think Walter Slezak, with Ina Claire in "Ode to Liberty," at the National, looks like Alan Hale . . . Miss Claire looks like a mere million dollars!

Howard You Doing Note.

Speaking of "Ode to Liberty," Sidney Howard almost took the words out of our mouth when he named his comedy. We were much concerned at the time by a tragic little item which we always thought of as "Owed to Creditors!"

Police Place Wagers, Arrest Obliging Taker

Charles Harrison, 31, colored, was charged with operating a lottery after his arrest yesterday at a cigar store in the 1700 block of Fourteenth street. Vice squad operatives said they had placed bets with him.

The policemen, led by Sergt. George C. Deyoe, said that they seized "numbers books" and horse-race betting slips.

Their New Pictures Open Today

Incitement To Disaffection.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is recommending for consideration by its members various legislative proposals designed to safeguard the country against revolutionary political activities. It suggests enactment of a sedition law prohibiting advocacy of violent overthrow of the Government, a law denying use of the mails to individuals or organizations disseminating "subversive" doctrines, and recommends various other repressive measures directed particularly against aliens.

If the forces of revolt were in the ascendancy, it is evident that laws of this sort could be of no effect. On the other hand, a government resting securely upon the support of the majority has little to fear from the revolutionary sentiments of a minority. Consequently nothing is gained and much may be lost through resort to repressive measures which alienate that fortunately large number to whom free speech is a cherished and inalienable right.

Attempts to suppress Communistic activities by the methods suggested in the Chamber of Commerce report would probably intensify unrest by creating disaffection among normally law-abiding citizens. Certainly the reaction of the British public to a measure of like character recently introduced in that liberty-loving country should be a warning over here. The bill in question was designed to prevent Communists from inciting civil servants, and men in the Army and Navy, to break the laws. The wide powers given to the authorities to search for treasonable documents brought vigorous protests from all classes, however, as noted by Stephen King-Hall in an article published on the page opposite today.

A sound instinct aroused British opposition to a law of this sort, even though its objective undoubtedly appealed to the average man. The British are aware of the menace to the rights and liberties of individuals which result from sedition laws like those suggested by the Chamber of Commerce. The institutions of a free people can not be protected against subversive activities by destroying the safeguards of the common man against the intrusive prying of a czaristic police.

Opportune Reminder.

In his first public address since resigning his position as Director of the Budget, Lewis W. Douglas unsparingly attacked the policy of spending huge sums for public works, thereby creating continuing deficits. It is fortunate that Mr. Douglas has not been deterred by a mistaken sense of loyalty to the Administration from giving the public the benefit of his expert judgment on these important matters of policy. His warning that a succession of deficits will lead eventually to currency inflation and "plunge 125,000,000 people into the destructive effects of a collapsed currency," comes at an opportune moment.

So far little effective opposition has developed to tentative and hastily devised projects for expanding public works outlays and financing an ambitious low-cost housing program with Federal funds. Increased spending for such purposes is being urged as the only practicable means of reviving the heavy industries. Its advocates also claim that the benefits, direct and indirect, would offset the dangers of permitting the deficit to rise by leaps and bounds.

Mr. Douglas, however, points out that the Government can not spend enough money in any single year to take the place of the stimulus provided by the $25,000,000,000 to $35,000,000,000 that private capital would expend under normal conditions. He also dismisses the argument that public works would be self-sustaining by stating that they have proved more often to be liabilities rather than assets. In short, the former Budget Director does not believe that the industrial pump can be primed by lavish Government spending, except at a cost that would spell ruin for the country.

Mr. Douglas is a persuasive pleader for a return to tested fiscal policies and his words can not fail to carry weight with thoughtful men. He not only emphasizes the importance of a balanced budget, but he outlines a plan for achieving it, which affords a basis for helpful discussion. As some of his recommendations for retrenchment in emergency outlays would encounter determined political opposition at the present time, a less trenchant program might bring better practical results. But Mr. Douglas is indubitably expounding sound principles of public finance which the American people can not afford to forget. He is right in asserting that continuing deficits will lead in the end to a national debacle and more widespread destitution. As he says, there is no easy way out of our present troubles. Sacrifice and hard work are needed to send us forward along the road that leads to recovery.

Where Senator Borah Slips.

Senator Borah must always be taken seriously. And when he carries his developing fight for fundamental reorganization of the Republican Party to a political mass meeting in New York City, every word that he says should be scrutinized attentively. It is much more than a matter of local or partisan concern when one of the most partisan concern when one of our most vigorous political minds in the country seeks to bend one of the major parties to a new direction.

With much of the Senator's speech there can be no effective disagreement. His premise that "there must be at least two great political parties" will be criticized only by those who would substitute dictatorship for democracy. Nor is it possible to state the argument more concisely than in Mr. Borah's own words: "After all, it is upon the anvil of party strife that sound policies are hammered into form. Such is the nature of our institutions."

In his New York speech, however, the Senator's political thought did not maintain the high level indicated by this premise. It takes little analysis to realize that the importance of the party system lies, as Mr. Borah intimates, in the fact that it induces a clash of conflicting ideas from which something at least approximating the golden mean of good government may be forged. But it is clearly desirable that both the hammer and the anvil should be of firm, not brittle, material. Honest conflict between conservatism and radicalism will force both sides to reexamine their positions, will make short work of both blind reaction and reckless demagogery. No such real and vitalizing parliamentary procedure can be expected if the two major parties represent merely varying brands of conservatism, or varying brands of radicalism.

For this reason Mr. Borah's attitude becomes worse than disappointing—it becomes definitely reactionary—when he makes the astounding assertion that "to talk about a conservative party in this country within the near future, it seems to me, is to shut our eyes to all the conditions about us." In that statement is convincing evidence of serious limitations in the quality of the political thought of the senior Senator from Idaho, and, by that token, of the risk the Republican Party would run in lightly following his seductive lead.

We can assume, for purposes of the argument, that there is validity in Senator Borah's thesis that the great majority of Americans are demanding thorough-going social and economic reforms, regardless of the changes in our national structure which such demands involve. If this is true, and there is much evidence to support the thesis, the situation should be inspiring rather than terrifying. When a nation is no longer able to face its destiny courageously, its turn on the stage of history is drawing to a close.

But to accept this new psychology is in no sense justification for the extraordinary thesis that there is no more room for conservatism and a conservative party in the United States. Indeed the thoughtful radical would be the first to protest this argument. Those who most sincerely desire workable and truly valuable reforms are those who most clearly realize how essential it is that they be critically examined for defects in advance.

Under Mr. Borah's projected set-up the country would presumably have two competitive radical parties, each seeking to outbid the other in favoritism to those "common people" whose real desires are not chaotic change but economic security and a reasonable degree of certainty for the morrow. Such a set-up no student of politics will indorse. Indeed the only consolation in the picture is that it would be in fact impossible. Soon or late a Republican party such as Mr. Borah visualizes would either fly to pieces or force the Democratic party to become conservative.

From the viewpoint of theory it makes not the slightest difference whether the Republican party is radical and the Democratic party conservative, or vice versa. But from the viewpoint of good government it is essential that one of the two should hold back and criticize while the other pushes forward and experiments.

Many of our present difficulties, and here Mr. Borah will doubtless agree, are fundamentally due to the fact that for years we had two essentially conservative parties and none which stood for fundamental social advances. It would be out of the frying pan and into the fire to swing to an opposite disequilibrium, with the two major parties committed to incalculable experimentation and none to speak in behalf of an order which, whatever its shortcomings, has done pretty well for the people by any standard of human achievement.

The Speakership.

Successive withdrawals of competing candidates have left Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, in a strategic position to capture the Speakership when Congress reassembles. As a majority leader during the last session he held the inside track in the Speakership race from the beginning. His prospective advancement would not only be in line with precedent. It would also come as a reward for a long period of service to the Democratic Party in the House of Representatives.

It is well that this major contest has been virtually settled before Congress convenes. Prolonged fights over strategic positions often leave an aftermath of bitterness which tends to break the House into blocs and factions. Because of the top-heavy Democratic majority in the new House the trend toward factionalism is expected to be unusually pronounced next year. Hence, the prospective selection of Mr. Byrns without a contest is doubly significant, for he is recognized as a unifying and consolidating influence.

Present indications are that there will be a free-for-all scramble for the position of majority leader in the House. It is to be hoped that the choice will be made on the basis of executive ability and not by vote-trading or political jugglery. Since majority leaders so frequently succeed to the Speaker's chair, equal attention to the real requirements of the office should be given in their selection.

War Debts And War Profits.

Today another payment by our governmental war debtors falls due, and again all but Finland are in default. Eventually, of course, the divergent viewpoints of the debtors and their creditor must be sufficiently reconciled to permit of a compromise settlement that will remove the stigma of default and dissipate the bitterness and misunderstanding that have precluded necessary adjustments.

The economic and financial aspects of the debt controversy have been exhaustively discussed in numerous interchanges between the United States and the debtor governments. The disrupting effects upon world trade of the transfer of large annual payments of a noncommercial nature have been convincingly demonstrated. The impossibility of continuing to make such payments to a creditor country that is not willing to accept goods and services in discharge of the obligation has been set forth on many occasions.

But the late President Coolidge's question: "They hired the money, didn't they?" seems to sum up the feeling of the average American citizen. He is scarcely to be blamed for not following the somewhat technical arguments which are offered in defense of nonpayment, while he is keenly conscious of the fact that foreign defaults have added between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 to the annual debt charges borne by American taxpayers.

The belief that an unduly heavy proportion of the cost of the war has been transferred to the shoulders of our taxpayers fails, however, to take account of certain factors very much in the mind of the debtor states. The latter are not disposed to forget that the money borrowed to finance the war was largely spent in this country on supplies of American goods sold at inflated prices and at great profit to American industry.

It is a coincidence too striking to be overlooked that the Nye committee should release data showing the great profits made during the years of the World War on the eve of a payment-due day. As officials of the du Pont Co. point out, the Federal Govment benefitted largely by these war profits through taking a large percentage of them in the form of income, war and excess profits taxes.

According to some unofficial estimates, indeed, one-half or more of the money borrowed by the allied governments, amounting to over $10,000,000,000, was promptly recaptured by our Treasury. In the three years 1917 to 1919, inclusive, war and excess profits taxes alone yielded about $5,500,000,000 and additional hundreds of millions were obtained by levying heavy surtaxes upon the inflated incomes of the war period. A large part of these returns of course represented profits made on sales to foreign governments. It is salutary to remember that much of the money lent to our debtors returned so promptly to the Treasury.

As a result of these and other mitigating circumstances, the extent of the injury done to our taxpayers is less great than is generally supposed. A large proportion of the sum still owing represents exorbitant war profits and inflationary price advances which passed into the Treasury of the United States in the form of taxes collected during the war years.

A litigant in California entered suit for 20 septillion dollars. That's more money than even the Administration ever heard of, and we hope it doesn't.

The floating population of this country has reached an alarming percentage. Possibly only in Venice is this percentage exceeded.

Collecting The Sales Tax.

(From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.)

It is rather early to reach sound conclusions regarding the effectiveness of the sales tax. A certain amount of confusion was unavoidable. The public is still confused and stores were handicapped because there was so little time to become familiar with the hastily drafted regulations. It appears, however, that an earnest effort is being made by most responsible business concerns to collect the tax and that the public is doing the paying with as little complaining as could be expected.

This does not mean that the sales tax experiment is a success or that it is sound. All it proves is that the business community and the public generally are willing to cooperate in enforcing any law that has reasonable justification. Dissatisfaction will no doubt be more in evidence when the inevitable inequalities become more apparent. Already it should be obvious that if we are to have a sales tax it should be collected at the source by the Federal Government and distributed to States and local communities. This would end all the difficulties over trying to avoid taxes by shifting trading habits and abortive attempts by one community to tax people who buy in another.

Commending A Veto.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The rank and file of the Filipino people are grateful to Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy for his veto of the divorce law passed by the Philippine legislature. The overwhelming majority of the 14,000,000 Filipinos are Catholics and they don't believe in divorce at all.

Those Filipinos who have observed the operation of the divorce laws in America are doubly grateful that they do not have those laws in their own country. Americans should be ashamed of the divorce record of their country. Filipinos should not imitate that record, even though they are called uncivilized, illiberal and antiquated.

We Filipinos are satisfied with the present law which grants marital separation with no right of remarriage during the life of each spouse on the ground of adultery. This strict law is the expression of one of the really deep-seated convictions of the Filipino people. It has worked for the integrity and happiness of the Filipino home. It has been a blessing in every way. A few misalliances among the millions of happy marriages should not be the basis of a law that has resulted in moral degradation in other lands. V. M. DEL VAL.

Emergency Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A certain part of the public is becoming deaf with the roars, and tired of reading President Roosevelt's and Mr. Hopkins' eloquently philanthropic statements about the emergency relief bureaus giving work to the unemployed American men and not allowing them or their dependents to suffer.

The statements mentioned are not being substantiated to the letter. They are, therefore, misleading to those who believe in the Government and to those who are earning a comfortable living. They are also mystifying and exasperating to the Americans needful of remunerative occupation for their personal support and for attending to their sacred domestic obligations.

I have applied for work at all of the emergency relief offices in the District of Columbia and it has not been given to me. I have made requests for work—not charity—because the Congress of the United States has appropriated millions of dollars for creating and giving compensated occupation to Americans who can not find it in private enterprises. But each of the said bureaus has sent me to the other (either its superior or its subordinate).

Evidently there is something wrong or neglected in the costly administration of the emergency relief bureaus in the District. It is unbelievable that the well-paid men in charge thereof are deliberately abusing the needy workers or deceiving the public.

I ask Mr. Hopkins, by this open letter, to say truthfully in which of the emergency relief bureaus or public offices in the District can one find reasonably compensated work—not every man is a mason, carpenter, blacksmith or engineer. There are many American men capable and anxious to work, who have paid American colleges for their education, to whom paid occupation is now as imperatively necessary as it is for the unemployed professional shop or field worker. D. ZEDUMREL.

Washington, Dec. 12.

Community Chests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are two observations that may be in order relative to the Community Chest drives recently concluded the country over. The first of these is in reference to the coercion of wage earners by employers who desire to report 100 per cent contributions. It is a fact easily proven that 100 per cent contributions invariably involve coercion of a certain proportion of employes. To avoid this, subscriptions should always be solicited by outsiders and never by an officer or employe of a plant. This is the plan followed by those who want to avoid the charge of intimidation, the collection of contributions against the will of the donor.

In these days of extremely low wages and salaries, a large proportion of workers in every institution should never be called upon to make any contribution whatsoever for community needs. To hold the veiled threat of discharge over employes is as reprehensible as it would be to take the money from their pockets. It amounts to the same thing. No one who is ready to grant to others the status of free men will make the mistake of coercing them. Charity is ruined if it be not voluntary. He who coerces his employes can not be truly patriotic.

The second mistake made in so many towns and cities is that of including in the Community Chest such uplift institutions as the Boy Scouts, commendable though these may be. The vast majority of Boy Scouts come form well-to-do families who would scorn to accept charity direct, and yet in the aggregate, millions of dollars are collected for charity and are then turned over to the managers of Boy Scout organizations.

The McKellar Rider.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you on behalf of myself and a number of others for the interest your paper has shown relative to the McKellar rider to the deficiency appropriation act, which threatens to throw away our civil service rights.

I was one of the former employes of the Bureau of Prohibition, appointed thereto by open competitive civil service examination. I served faithfully, working 15 to 20 hours daily for over two years, then was furloughed through no fault of my own and am unable to secure employment on account of my former Government position.

I hope you continue the good work that you have been doing and keep me and the other civil service men informed of what's going on in Congress.

Mistletoe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No "feature" that I have ever seen in a newspaper is lovelier than your "Legend of the Mistletoe" in The Post of December 9. It has a tender air and implication and preserves, for those to whom the Christmas legend is no longer patent, a sweetness of memory that is life-giving.

I congratulate you upon such an accomplishment. Whoever wrote it has poetic instinct.

A Critic Of Critics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It begins to appear that adverse critics of this Administration, and of what they probably term the intellectual marathon being run off by the brain trust at Washington, are shortsighted to the verge of the reactionary. Indeed, those who seem fully alive to the continuous speeding up of the tempo of the world's doings, this country included, are distressingly few; but, fortunately, the President is one of that number.

The present civilization had its pioneers in thought and action, else it had not survived—nor had America but for a Washington, a Jefferson, a Jackson and a Lincoln. Each era had its leader; each wilderness of disturbed thought and deranged affairs its Moses—and its carping critics as well.

These carpers prate of what they regard as the welter of pseudo-brilliant schemes, that threaten each to tread upon the heels of those in front, and all to stumble and pile up in an inchoate mass of misbegotten, unrelated undertakings. So blind are they, very likely, they allocate the New Deal to some future chimerical era that will be ready for it. That era is here! Such has been the history of the reactionary in the past, and will continue to be.

Birthdays.

Most great moderns have their birthdays well established. Nobody suggests that Lincoln was not born on February 12, 1809; Darwin was born the same day and year. But Mayor LaGuardia, being congratulated yesterday on attaining another year, was not sure whether he was 52 or 53. Today it is announced that Arthur Brisbane is 70. Some old issues of "Who's Who," the sketches in which are supposed to be written by the subject, would make Mr. Brisbane 71. The highly interested reader is left in doubt whether Mr. Brisbane was born on December 12, 1863—the date, as all remember, when Lee refused to exchange prisoners—or on December 12, 1864, the day Sherman reached the sea. Not that doubts or discrepancies in such trifling matters annoy Mr. LaGuardia or Mr. Brisbane; their efforts to make the world brighter and better overshadow little things like birth dates. Most lesser folk are otherwise remembering exactly how the years have been notched on the stick of Time. Let us hope, in passing, that the Dionne sisters will never have an argument about their birthdays.

(New York Sun.)

Shoplifting De Luxe.

The Nation recently reveled in the observance of National Cheese Week, a fact which lends added zest to the announcement that a cheese of vast size was recently purloined in some mysterious way from a shop in Nice on the French Riviera.

This enormous cheese, weighing approximately 100 pounds, vanished from the stall of one of Nice's foremost grocery emporia during the rush hour. The gendarmes are still blinking their eyes in astonishment, for they are completely at a loss to explain the phenomenon.

Apparently the big cheese theft in Nice will have to go down in history with the theft of an entire bridge some time ago in Hungary and the purloining of a house in Yugoslavia.

The Post Impressionist

New Deals, Old Nooses.

Post Office, Saturday.

SHANE on capital punishment, Blackstone and Story on New Deals: these are the latest echoes which two of our recent Columns have evoked—epistolary echoes.

One correspondent wants to know why we don't believe in the death penalty. The other——

But both are sufficiently controversial to be quoted more or less in extenso.

Mr. A. J. Shane takes his typewriter in hand at Beltsville, Md., and—apropos of what we wrote about the murder of District Attorney Key by Congressman Sickles—taps out:

"So-o-o, you don't believe in capital punishment! Why? I'm just curious to know your argument against it.

"When I was young and foolish, I though capital punishment was as much murder as the crime that entailed the execution.

"I think Gen. Sickles deserved his freedom and was right in forgiving his wife. And I believe that capital punishment should never be given front-page room in the press. But I also believe that such punishment is frequently necessary and is often a good thing."

Well, we don't dissent at all. We never did. What we said was that we failed to enjoy the only hanging we ever witnessed. We said that we believed in the legal principle.

The New Deal letter is another matter. Its author is a Washingtonian, Mr. J. D. Higinweather. And says he:

"Mrs. Sparrow's quotations (from Montaigne) in your column are gratifying evidence that we twentieth century mossbacks have respectable antecedents. Those quotations might, indeed, be supplemented by some from later philosophers—sufficiently remote, however, still to have had their feet upon the ground.

"Thus Blackstone in his 'Introduction to the Study of the Law,' about 1760:

"'The mischiefs that have arisen to the public from inconsiderate alterations in our laws are too obvious to be called in question; and how far they have been owing to the defective education of our Senators is a point well worthy the public attention. The common law of England has fared like other venerable edifices of antiquity, which rash and inexperienced workmen have ventured to new dress and refine with all the rage of modern improvement. Hence frequently its symmetry has been destroyed, its proportions distorted, and its majestic simplicity exchanged for specious embellishments and fantastic novelties.'"

Nor does Mr. Higinweather stop with England's Blackstone. He pushes forward to "our own Judge Story" and finds that jurist, in his comments on the Federal Constitution (S. 71) "stigmatizing certain legislative dreams" as follows:

"Even in our domestic concerns, what are our voluminous and ever-changing codes but monuments of deficient wisdom, hasty resolves, and still more hasty repeals? What are they but admonitions to the people of the dangers of rash and premature legislation, of ignorance that knows not its own mistakes, or of overweening confidence which heeds not its own follies?"

This is hard language. But please recollect that it is not the Post-Impressionist's. We lack the Gibbonesque organ-tone, the grand manner. We did not even exhume those passages. We didn't even remember them from the distant days when we "read law." Blame Blackstone and Story for uttering the words—and Mr. Higinweather for bringing them to the light at this time.

Indeed, not content with that, he returns to Great Britain. He turns up Thomas Babbington Macaulay:

"Everywhere there is a class of men who cling with fondness to whatever is ancient, and who, even when convinced by overpowering reasons that innovation would be beneficial, consent to it with many misgivings and forebodings.

"We find also everywhere another class of men, sanguine in hope, bold in speculation, always pressing forward, quick to discern the imperfections of whatever exists, disposed to think lightly of the risks and inconveniences which attend improvements, and disposed to give every change credit for being an improvement.

"In the sentiments of both classes there is something to approve. But of both the best specimens will be found not far from the common frontier. The extreme section of one class consists of bigoted dotards; the extreme section of the other consists of shallow and reckless empirics."

That's as may be.

Ourselves, we venture no opinion upon either these ancient sentiments or their modern application. All that we do venture is the remark that Lord Macaulay, in his own person, could scarcely be described as such a middle-of-the-road man as he pretends to approve.

Recovery in England Stimulates Politics

National Government Invites Public to Examine Record of Past Four Years.

By Stephen King-Hall.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

London, Nov. 20 (By Mail).

TODAY His Majesty with traditional ceremony opened the fourth session of the present Parliament, a session which coincides with the fourth year of the national government's term of office. The signs and portents of a general election are beginning to appear over the political horizon. The friends of the national government are constrained to invite the elector to look backward to 1931 in order that he may appreciate to the full the benefits he has enjoyed since the day he stunned the labor government at the polls, much as the New Dealers in America smote their opponents in November, 1934. In defence of the present administration it is claimed that both financially and commercially Great Britain has been restored to as good a position as can be expected in a crisis-ridden world, and to a better position than that of any other great power.

In the realm of finance the great Conversion Scheme and the restoration of budgetary stability leading to cheap money as the prime condition for recovery, are being stressed as the major achievements. In commerce a series of trade agreements are held to have blazed a few trails through the world-wide jungle of restrictions on international trade, and it is argued by National Government supporters that this measure of success could not have been secured without the bargaining powers of the tariff and quotas. In agriculture, the activities of Mr. Walter Elliot are brought forward as examples of the thesis that old-fashioned Great Britain can, within carefully defined limits, give the codes of the New Deal a running start and still outstrip them in effectiveness. The friends of the National Government are concentrating on the perspective view of the government record because they know that the last session of Parliament has not left too pleasant a taste in the mouth of the electorate.

THE government has recently experienced bad breaks in two directions. First and foremost there has been a feeling that its economic achievements have not been paralleled in the sphere of politics—especially foreign politics. The underlying feeling behind the immense vote which was cast for the National Government was a desire for constructive leadership in time of crisis, and there is a widespread feeling that Sir John Simon has been temperamentally incapable of acting as a leader in foreign affairs.

The ability of the Prime Minister to create an atmosphere is accepted by all; the disappointment at the inability of the Foreign Secretary to take advantage of MacDonaldian atmospheres is very general, for it must always be remembered that the British electorate is very conscious of the importance to its material well-being of a firmly established international peace. The gibe of the Liberal leader, Sir Herbert Samuel, that the epitaph of the government would be "Died of chronic complacency" applies particularly to their conduct of foreign affairs.

A second blunder has been the introduction of the "Incitement to Disaffection Bill" which has become law in a form radically amended from its original appearance. The purpose of the bill is to prevent Communists from inciting government servants, especially those in the armed forces of the Crown, to break the law. In its original form it appeared to give the executive far wider powers in such matters as the right of search for treasonable documents than has hitherto been the case. It was in vain that the government spokesmen protested that the bill was in reality little more than a codification of existing law. Hardly was the bill produced than a violent and sustained opposition sprang up in every quarter of the political compass.

Lawyers, churchmen, publicists, and of course all Socialists and Liberals combined to declare that the national government was taking advantage of its huge majority to launch a surprise attack on the liberty of the subject. The government accepted amendment after amendment, but would not drop the bill. Even the Archbishop of Canterbury declared it was unacceptable to him in its original form, and Lord Reading, ex-viceroy of India, and one-time lord chancellor, said he failed to understand why the bill had been introduced. It was passed in its emasculated form at the end of the session, but not before the nine Socialist peers in the House of Lords had forced that august body to hold an all-night sitting and created an all-time record for the number of divisions.

IF we turn from the balance sheet of the government to the indications at the bye elections of the standing of government stock, we find that in municipal government the Socialists have staged a very impressive comeback. Labor now controls the London County Council and under the able leadership of Mr. Herbert Morrison they seem to be making an excellent job of this great administrative problem. Mr. Morrison's career should be watched, for his ultimate address may be No. 10 Downing street as prime minister of a Labor government, but not in 1936. That the national government would lose a considerable number of seats if a general election were held in the near future is shown by the fact that there have been eight Labor gains in bye elections since 1931 and four of these have occurred during the present year. At nearly every bye election the Conservative vote has been reduced. But there has been nothing suggesting a landslide. The national losses have been but little more than the inevitable swing of the pendulum.

It is not at all clear at the moment of writing how the forces will line up for the next political battle. The Socialists are fairly compact, though there is a wide gulf between some of the conservatively minded trades unionist leaders and the radical Sir Stafford Cripps, who continues in and out of season to shock many of his colleagues by explaining that it is the business of Socialists in office to be Socialists. He shocks them and gives much ammunition to the tories because he insists upon stating precisely what socialism means, and Great Britain is full of people who will stand quite a lot of socialism if only it can be called something more respectable. Sir Stafford obstinately refuses to behave as did Mr. Gladstone when in response to a request from Queen Victoria as to what he would do if called to office, he bowed low and observed: "Madam! I never prescribe till I'm called in."

• • • •

THE Liberals are in a peculiar position. Split into warring factions with Lloyd George crouching on the edge of the fray, and perhaps contemplating a comeback, the political future of the Liberal party seems desperate at a time when the appeal of liberalism in its widest sense is rapidly gaining strength.

In the immediate future the legislative scene will be dominated by the government of India bill, but this great question, though it may produce a deep cleavage in the Conservative party, a cleavage which will test Mr. Baldwin's powers of leadership to the utmost, should not become an electoral issue. It would be a political blunder of the first magnitude to allow one of the greatest experiments of all time in the art of democratic government to be treated as a bone in the political dog fight.

A determined attack on bad housing conditions, a bill to prevent ribbon development along bye-pass roads, and a policy of "developing and accelerating imperial air communications" are some of the minor but more popular activities with which the national government will seek to woo the electorate, whose behavior when next they visit the polls will be largely determined by the degree and extent to which economic recovery is held during the coming 12 months. At the moment of writing the internal recovery of the United Kingdom is confounding the economists by persisting beyond the point at which it had been prophesied it could not continue without some measure of world recovery.

It is quite possible that the buoyancy of the recovery here is proof that world conditions have in fact taken a turn for the better, and it is with this thought in mind that we are all anxiously watching developments in the U. S. A.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Not Really Dead.

THE hastily called pep meeting over at the NRA Wednesday night for the purpose of bolstering up spirits made low by Gen. Johnson's blast reveals the need for clarification of the word "dead." The general said something about the NRA being dead—dead as a doornail—which caused so much excitement among the employes that the leaders had to reassure them that the ship was in no danger, that it would, in fact, remain permanently afloat. And it will.

BARGERON.

The general didn't mean that it is dead to the point of breaking up. And neither do others who agree with him that it is dead. What is meant is that it is dead so far as functioning is concerned.

• • • •

Our governmental agencies never die to the extent of vanishing from the scene. Instead, the deader they get the more they seem to grow. There are agencies which seem to enjoy their greatest health after the spotlight has been removed from them. Unlike other plants, they sprout best in the shade. So far as the NRA is concerned the assurers at the pep meeting could not have been on safer ground when they gave the assurances that it is here to stay.

Something is expected to be done to it at the coming session of Congress but no one expects anything like a major operation. Structurally it has its roots too deeply planted to be really hurt. Its fangs have already been removed. Congress will hardly do anything more than ratify that accomplished fact.

You see, its worst enemies say its "good points" must be preserved. It was set up in the beginning with this in view. Its planners made of it that sort of organization, one by which the good points could be saved.

• • • •

It might be said in this respect that no other governmental agency has such a solid foundation or so much intrinsic worth. A lot of our agencies, in fact, most of them, were set up with no such foresight. That is to say that in their conception there was no placing of good points that could later be preserved. They were set up without any regard to good points, indeed, and yet they have had no trouble in continuing to exist.

One can appreciate, then, that if agencies with no good points should be able to hang on, an agency with good points will have no trouble at all.

So carefully, too, was NRA designed that the good points are not lumped in one place where they could be segregated and the rest of the organization lopped off. They are scattered around in various places, so imbedded in the structure that any effort to carve them out and place them all together would necessitate tearing down the whole thing.

• • • •

Some of our geologists hold, as a matter of fact, that the structure in its present shape is a necessary covering for the good points and that any exposure of them to the elements would cause incalculable harm. They are unusually delicate and as sensitive to the light as anything could be. Held in the hand for just a minute or so one of these good points has been known to completely evaporate.

They are tiny things, almost imperceptible to the naked eye. It really takes a powerful magnifying glass for one to observe their virtues. Well, you can imagine that if one of the good points of the NRA is tiny, its virtues would be tinier still because there are two or more virtues in every good point.

If they were much bigger the good points could be likened to oysters with their fibrous make-up of virtues. But, of course, no one of the good points is as big as an oyster, so the comparison will not hold. Forsooth, it might be said that no one of the good points is as good as an oyster. They have this in common, though. Neither oysters nor the NRA good points can stand discussion.

No Escape.

"Be sure your sin will find you out"—the words came down from ages past; they are a motto for the scout who is inclined to travel fast. The man who would by hook or crook go with the gang where Croesus rides, should read that sentence in the book which is the best of moral guides. The country's jails are jammed with gents who shake the welkin with their groans; some got away with 50 cents, and some with half a million bones. And all of them, at first, no doubt, believed they'd always cut much grass; "Be sure your sin will find you out," such words were merely sounding brass. We're always reading dismal tales of men who had been trusted long, and who wound up in frowsy jails to meditate on sin and wrong. Once in a while a shifty knave will fool the people till he dies, and go down to an honored grave amid the mourners' anguished cries. But when he has been dead a while it will be found he was a fraud; by means of trickery and guile he builded up an ample wad. And then the ones he left behind, his aunts, his nieces and his wife, and all his kindred and his kind, must suffer for his misspent life. Al criminals believe at first that they are smarter than the rest; they say, "The law may do its worst, while we proceed to do our best. There's no law that we can not dodge, and we can conquer any fate; there is no danger that we'll lodge where lesser sinners congregate." And so they canter round about, and pull sad tricks beneath the moon, until their sins shall find them out, which often happens pretty soon.

Night Baseball and Hot Dogs.

Baseball, the National game, shows distinct signs of going ga-ga. A proposal that the Boston Braves park be allowed to run dog races has been sidetracked for the present, but the National League has voted to play games at night.

• • • •

We may yet see a mixup in which greyhounds will play the infield and ball players will entertain the fans by chasing the electric rabbit.

• • • •

If you go to a ball park next summer and the umpire bawls, "Fido II batting for Dizzy Dean" or, "Gehrig running for the Six Dog," take it in your stride, fans.

• • • •

• • • •

The National League voted to permit only seven night baseball games a season per club and on the home grounds, but if all the clubs take advantage of the rule, it will mean a lot of electrically-lighted errors in 1935.

• • • •

But if the umpires can't guess 'em right in daylight, what are they going to do when it's night?

• • • •

Baseball after dark could be encouraged by some big league clubs on the ground that the night is the right time for circus acts.

• • • •

And every club has at least one pitcher who looks more like the man on the flying trapeze.

• • • •

The more conservative magnates oppose night baseball. They think it would lead to a Barnum atmosphere with a steam caliope behind third base and a pink lemonade stand at first.

• • • •

With some of those eccentric southpaws parading in a Congress of Strange People, and a tattooed lady playing shortstop.

• • • •

Another objection is that night baseball will bring the game closer to dog racing. The minute you link those two amusements there will be chaos. When the fans take to yelling, "Put in a new rabbit!" and calling for a greyhound to "run it out, you big bum!" the situation will have become intricate.

• • • •

But it's a time of strange suggestions. And if we see a whippet hound arguing with an umpire it won't surprise us.

Too Much.

Max Baer, heavyweight champion of the world and Hollywood, wants to fight Hamas and Lasky, two contenders, on the same night. But watching one heavyweight fight one heavyweight a night is generally considered to be enough of an ordeal for the average fan.

The Administration is out to end profits in war. Before or after it ends them in peace?

All this talk of taking the profit out of war clearly points to a movement to put Mars on the dole.

'I. Q.' of 200 Given Navy Recruit at 17

Kansas City, Dec. 14 (AP).—Burton Vincent, jr., 17-year-old Navy recruit, is advanced by Lieut. Comdr. C. M. Holten for a place near Brooklyn's boy wonder, Arthur Greenwood, and Albert Einstein, in the matter of intelligence.

"Vincent has an intelligence quotient of more than 200," said Commander Holten, a recruiting officer. "He completed in 28 minutes an enlistment test which normally requires an hour. The grade was 94."

Woman Whose Kin Fined Washington Dies

Washington, Pa., Dec. 14 (AP). Mrs. Jane Ann Reed May, granddaughter of a Conolial squire, who, tradition says, fined George Washington for swearing, died yesterday, 15 days before her 104th birthday anniversary.

The story handed down by succeeding generations in Washington County is that David Reed, grandfather of Mrs. May, fined the then Lieutenant Colonel Washington for using profane language during a hearing on a disputed land claim.

Reverend Gentlemen

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

IN January, 1886, my future brother-in-law and I took the midnight boat from New Haven to New York—and how I wish those boats were running now! We arrived in New York early on a Sunday morning, went over to Brooklyn by the horse-cars, and got seats in the gallery of Plymouth Church, which seemed in only a few minutes to be filled. At the appointed time Henry Ward Beecher took his place in the pulpit, a rather heavily built man, as I remember him, with copious white hair. He gave out the text for his sermon from the sixth chapter of St. John: "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life."

• • • •

With a vigor unimpaired by age, and in a voice that reached to the uttermost parts of the big church, he preached on the spiritual life. Although it is nearly 50 years since I heard that sermon, I remember it vividly; he made a humorous allusion to his father, Lyman Beecher, and at various moments in the sermon he rose to the heights of dramatic eloquence.

On that same evening we went to the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and heard the famous T. De Witt Talmage, who had perhaps as much notoriety as fame. Here also the vast auditorium was crowded. A man with a cornet led the singing. Talmage preached on the Elder Brother of the parable of the Prodigal Son (St. Luke xv) and gave that sanctimonious prig an ironical and humorous appraisal that brought roars of laughter from the audience.

• • • •

Five years later, when a graduate student at Harvard, I often heard Phillips Brooks preach in his own Trinity Church in Boston. Occasionally he came over to Cambridge to preach. I heard him also in other places. I can not say whether or not it was his invariable rule, but never when I heard him in his own church did he use any notes.

One Sunday in London, in the year 1890, I crossed the Thames and went over to the south side to hear Charles H. Spurgeon preach in the enormous Tabernacle, built especially to accommodate the throngs that came to hear him.

• • • •

I doubt if any preacher has ever had a larger number of readers of his printed sermons. After Spurgeon died his sermons were printed week after week, and were bought by hundreds of thousands.

If a vote were taken in America today, to ascertain the successor in our country of Beecher and Brooks, there can be no doubt that the leading name would be Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Even Sponsors Decry New York Sales Tax

New York, December 14.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA'S Christmas gift to Father Knickerbocker, or if you like, Father Knickerbocker's gift to the unemployed, takes the form of a 2 per cent sales tax which went into effect this week. Nobody yet knows what the results are going to be, but the measure had the unique distinction of being denounced by everybody, including its sponsors. They freely admit that its passage has put them in a political hole. But their attitude seems to be that of Old Bill—"If you know a better 'ole, go to it." An increased subway fare might have been a better 'ole, but not politically.

One result of the sales tax took place in advance. Under the threat of it people actually did their Christmas shopping early. Thus it accomplished what the sloganeers failed to do in all the years they were at it. The local stores were simply jammed by customers saving pennies and in some cases, quite substantial sums. Business was good anyway and it got better in a sudden leap. Then, irrationally, it stayed better.

The tax presents some oddities. If a man wants a dozen 5-cent cigars he can buy them one by one and save money. Ice cream, as a food, isn't taxed. But an ice cream soda, dolled up with syrup, and made a luxury, is taxed. Some drug stores tax sundaes and others don't. Pushcart men say it affects their business. Bartenders don't like the tax because it's hard to explain to customers, when they get a little way along, what the extra penny a drink is for. A whisky sour at 36 cents is apt to taste funny, anyway.

• • • •

MERCHANTS in Westchester and Queens like the tax. They say commuters will do their shopping where they eat breakfast and dinner and the tax doesn't figure. New Yorkers are instructed to remit the tax to the city when they buy outside. Imagine a New Yorker faithfully sending back his tax all during vacation! Mr. McGoldrick, the comptroller, was evidently thinking of the Timid Soul when he stressed that provision.

A good many people who own cars are going to make the extra run beyond the city line to get their gas, and news cars will almost certainly be bought outside the city. On the other hand, entertainment seekers will continue to flock into New York because it has potent attractions. Theaters haven't exacted the tax yet, but the restaurants are having all sorts of difficulty trying to collect it.

Mayor LaGuardia displayed a Spartan spirit regarding the tax which supplied a noble example for the rest of the populace. Unfortunately, nobody followed it. For some time the LaGuardias have been planning the purchase of a mahogany dining suite. They were ready for it last week, in fact had the order in. But Mrs. LaGuardia waited until Monday, just for the rare privilege of being stuck for the tax. Her purchase amounted to $371.09 and it cost her husband $7.24 extra.

Those out of work will rejoice in the tax. It means at least that they will get their daily bread. The merchants, however, have a legitimate grievance in that they are afflicted with a burdensome system which cuts their profit to operate. The city answers that they get the benefit of the fractional tax which more than compensates them. Nobody has yet discovered whether New York is going to make Uncle Sam collect the tax on stamp sales over 12 cents.

THE vicissitudes of treasure hunting are apt to accumulate in queer ways. Simon Lake, the submarine inventor, recently descended in a new undersee boat he has contrived to search for the golden hoard which is supposed to lie in the hold of a sunken British frigate in the East River. The pumps which were to do the trick pumped up quantities and quantities of coal, but no gold. Mr. Lake says this is all to the good because the gold will come up just as easily—when it is found.

Also Mr. Peter Elliston, 27 years old, is back in New York after hunting treasure on the famous Cocos Island, where the pirates of the Spanish Main are presumed to have sequestered their spoils. Mr. Elliston is a young Englishman who hadn't much to do and bought himself a share in Treasure Recovery, Limited.

It turned out to be extremely limited. The expedition had geophysical divining apparatus and everything, but from the first moment they ran into trouble with the government of Costa Rica which claims sovereignty over Cocos. Finally Costa Rica sent its entire navy out to Cocos, closed down the works, and brought back the treasure hunters.

Mr. Elliston found no treasure, lost what he had, and experienced considerable difficulty keeping out of a Costa Rica jail. Incidentally, the Costa Rican penal colony is on Cocos Island and the prisoners spend their time looking for lost treasure. Ironic, what?

Quarter-Century Cycle of Drought Is Spent, Experts Believe.

The deeper snows of grandpa's day, when he hitched old Dobbin to his open sleigh and slid over glistening streets to the accompaniment of jangling bells, are on their way back to the American winterscape.

So Weather Bureau scientists said yesterday, in stating they believe the continent is on the verge of a change of climate, with a return to increasing snowfall and rain and colder winters.

Just when this will happen nobody ventured to predict, but the weather experts believe it is due, perhaps next year, perhaps not for several years to come.

"There is no way of telling," said Willis Gregg, director of the Weather Bureau. "It seems, however, that America is in for a cycle of change of temperature. The rest is indefinite, and we can not say. We do know, however, that weather runs in cycles, and one is about due."

It was pointed out that for the last 25 years or so the average temperature of the United States has been growing warmer, the average rising about 1 degree every four years.

During the same period the rainfall and snowfall, classified by scientists as "precipitation," have been growing smaller. Just last summer heat and drought reached their peaks, with the searing sun drying up streams and rivers and killing cattle and crops in the Nation's granaries and grazing fields.

The pendulum is due to swing the other way, it now is believed. Weather records of the past show that apparently the cycles are a quarter of a century in length.

Since there have been 25 years of increasing heat and decreasing rain, they reason, they may expect that soon the trend will reverse itself, and the cold winters and deep snow return.

The normal average temperature for the United States is 54.4 degrees, and normal precipitation 30.2 inches. In 1909 the average temperature was nearly 2 degrees below normal. In 1933 it was 5 degrees above normal.

Post Chapel Is Dedicated

Rev. E. A. Walsh, Georgetown, Delivers Address at Fort Meade.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—The new post chapel, erected as a Public Works Administration project, was dedicated today to the strains of music by the Thirty-fourth Infantry band. While the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., of Georgetown University, Washington, delivered the dedicatory address, troops of the Sixty-sixth and Thirty-fourth Infantry regiments formed in front of the chapel building.

The new structure was presented by Col. J. P. McAdams, post commander, to Col. A. J. Brasted, chief of chaplains. Several prominent clergymen of Washington and Baltimore attended the services.

The chapel will be nondenominational. It will be open for regular services Sunday under E. J. Griffin, Catholic chaplain, and Chaplain J. O. Ensrud, Protestant chaplain.

The building is of Colonial architecture. It has an annex containing Sunday school class rooms, a social hall and chaplains' offices.

Good Will Fliers Crash Trying Street Landing

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 14 (AP).—Dr. A. E. Forsythe and Alfred Anderson, colored good will fliers, cracked up in a backyard in suburban Woodbrook today. They escaped with minor injuries.

Their plane was so much damaged it appeared likely the air tour would be abandoned. Trouble developed soon after the ship took off and the pilot made an attempt to land in a street.

Amnesia Victim Found After 2 Weeks' Search

Portsmouth, Ohio, Dec. 14 (AP).—A Nation-wide hunt for his only child came to a happy ending today for Attorney R. G. Diefendeffer, of Sheridan, Wyo.

He found his son, Raymond, jr., 18, in the county jail here, where the youth had come two days ago to ask Charles Clowe, head of the Police Record Bureau, to aid him in finding his parents. Suffering from amnesia, the youth disappeared two weeks ago from Ann Arbor, Mich., where he was attending the university.

Carroll County Shows $73,208 Budget Deficit

Commissioners Attribute Situation to Drastic Cut in Tax Rate.

Westminster, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.). A financial statement of Carroll County, submitted to the county commissioners by Paul F. Kuhns, county treasurer, this week, reveals a deficit in the 1933-34 budget of $73,208.36.

The county commissioners, who asserted that the deficit was caused by too drastic a reduction in the tax rate, cut last year from $1.60 to $1, stated they will attempt to overcome the deficit without an increase in the levy for next year.

Has Assets of $251,640.

The statement discloses that the county has assets of $251,640.56, which includes cash in banks amounting to $88,432.20; taxes receivable for the years 1929 to 1934, $189,791.95; and the deficit of $73,208.36. While taxes receivable were listed at $189,791.95, the commissioners pointed out that it is estimated that only $90,000 of this amount will be collected.

Liabilities of the county are listed as follows: Amount in 1933-1934 budget remaining unpaid, $235,951.67; overdraft in budget, $5,337.21; cost of Winfield School (not included in budget), $6,791; furniture at Winfield School, $1,127.60; estimated amount of repairs and replacements at county home and jail, ordered by grand jury, $250; road work (not included in budget), $22.80; tax sales and costs, less amount turned over by collector, $2,160.28.

Indebtedness Listed.

The county's indebtedness was listed as follows: 1933 bond issue, $175,000; lateral road bonds, $26,000; long-term warrants (Manchester School), $43,000; warrants (Winfield School), $20,000.

In referring to the county's financial condition, the commissioners declared they were not in favor of the policy adopted by previous boards in bonding the county to pay current expenses, and were against the sale of property for back taxes, in the majority of cases, because the tax sales generally were an added expense to the county.

A total of 53 registrates' judgments was filed in the Carroll County Circuit Court here this week by C. Robert Brilhart, tax collector, against property owners who have defaulted in payment of their assessments.

Pattison Retires From Circuit Court

Rounds Out 25 Years of Service for Maryland.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Chief Judge John R. Pattison, Democrat, of the First Judicial Circuit of Maryland, today rounded out a quarter of a century of active service on the State judiciary and retired to private life at his home in Cambridge. He will be succeeded within a few days by Judge Benjamin A. Johnson, Democrat, of Salisbury, who was elected last November for the full term of 15 years.

Judge Pattison was first appointed to the bench in 1909. A few years later he was elected for a full term. In the ordinary course of events he would have been transferred to the retired list three years ago, by reason of the statutory age limit of 70, but he was among several justices who, by special legislative act, were permitted to serve out their unexpired terms.

The retiring justice spent his last day of service with his associates of the court of appeals, the State's highest tribunal, of which he has been a prominent member, in consultation and filing of opinions in cases argued during the recent October term.

Men's Style Show Features Prom Of G. W. Juniors

Louise Kramer and Russell Payne led George Washington University's junior class in its annual prom in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel last night.

One of the ball's features was a men's style show, which displayed the latest tricks in clothes for men rather than fashions for women. The show was sponsored by the Raleigh Haberdashery, and was staged by Lucian B. Clark, I. I. De Bow, J. Warren Lawler, Charles Graves and Millard V. Crouch.

Seven students "tapped" for Steel Gauntlet, undergraduate honorary society, were honored at the prom. They were Ed Clark James Edwards, William Helverstine, Newell Lusby, Theodore Pierson, Walter Rhinehart and Leonard Stevens.

Payne was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair. He was assisted by Al Heckel, class president; Fred Rawlings and Paul Brogen.

Howard Blames Defeat On the 'Radio Trust'

Representative Edgar Howard, veteran Nebraska Democrat who was defeated in the last election, said yesterday that he attributed his defeat in part to the "radio trust" and that he intended to do something about it.

Howard, according to the Associated Press, said he was helping a group of unnamed legislators draft legislation which would require radio broadcasters to pay for the use of "God's own radio waves."

"Now the radio stations don't pay anything," he commented.

Cruel Scinetists Prying In Tuna's Private Life

Los Angeles, Dec. 14 (AP).—Sixty tuna fish are carrying brightly-colored little tags around the Pacific Ocean today to help science solve the riddle of where the tuna goes before it gets inside a tin can.

Tuna is one of the world's most important food fishes and often is sought by rod-and-reel sportsmen. But the secret of its travels and breeding grounds is a mystery.

Martin Leaves Graf At Rio to Fly to U. S.

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 14 (AP).—Rex Martin, assistant director of the U. S. Bureau of Civil Aeronautics, will leave here tomorrow for the United States by commercial airplane.

Martin arrived here yesterday from Europe on the Graf Zeppelin. While abroad he attended the aeronautical exposition at Paris and the start of the England-to-Melbourne air derby.

Eight File Claim For Citizenship

Preliminary Hearings Held in Franklin County.

Chambersburg, Pa., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Eight persons who had filed applications for naturalization were given preliminary hearings yesterday at the Franklin County courthouse. The final examinations will be held in March.

Magistrate to Hear Vote Tie Contest

Annapolis, Dec. 14 (AP).—Acting on proceedings brought in an effort to break an election tie for a seat on the Board of Anne Arundel County Commissioners, the local circuit court today granted the two contesting candidates the right to take testimony in support of their claims.

Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., in issuing the order designated Police Magistrate Thomas G. Basil, Annapolis, to hear the case, take all testimony in writing and submit it sealed to the Clerk of the Circuit Court. Upon the return of this testimony the court will pass an order for the examination and inspection of original ballots as may be deemed necessary.

T. Roland Brown, Republican, and John J. Levay, Democrat, each received 7,512 votes for the seventh place on the Board of Commissioners. Brown, through his attorney, Noah A. Hillman, filed a friendly action against Levay alleging certain irregularities in the counting of ballots and asserting that he was elected by a majority of all lawful ballots. Levay, through his attorney, George B. Woelfel, filed an answer neither affirming or denying the allegations.

Mental Hygiene Director Sought

Virginia's Welfare Board Hunts Specialist.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Public Welfare Commissioner Arthur W. James today said he does not know whom he can find to succeed the late William F. Drewry as director of his mental hygiene bureau and clinic, but he will hunt for one.

The public welfare board, meeting here today, recommended that a young, recently trained specialist in psychiatry be sought as the director.

Commissioner James said his hunt will start as soon as the board determines the type of man best suited to the general program of mental hygiene and child guidance work.

CRIME . . . AND THE BLACK HAND

CRIME is as old as Cain and Abel. Rackets date back to the time when Joseph's brethren sold him down the river—and before.

BUT organized crime in America . . . organized crime as we know it, with its extortion, its killings, its corruption of officials and its general terrorism . . . what was its beginning? Was it brought to these shores by the notorious Mafia, or "Black Hand?" And is hte organization still in active existence?

CERTAINLY it would seem so. Arson . . . burglary . . . bombing . . . gambling . . . hijacking . . . narcotic smuggling . . . blackmail . . . kidnaping . . . murder . . . the list of crimes committed every day in cold blood is appalling—and almost endless.

IN tomorrow's Sunday Post, Felix Bruner reveals the shocking history of the crime disease which has weakened the whole social structure of our Nation . . . and draws a vivid picture of the insidious crime system which threatens all Americans. Be sure to read this startling story . . . in the Special Articles Section . . . tomorrow.

3 Debutantes Make Bow to D. C. Society

Misses Alexander and Rowan Presented at Reception.

Miss Ruth Patton Has Debut at Dance in Sulgrave Club.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Renick Alexander, on New Hampshire avenue, was the scene of a reception yesterday at which they were hosts with their cousins, Capt. and Mrs. Stephen C. Rowan. It marked the presentation of their daughters, Miss Louise Piquette Alexander and Miss Elizabeth Rowan, to society. Mrs. Rowan and her daughter have been spending the season in Washington while Capt. Rowan was attached to the U. S. S. California.

The Alexander home was a delightful place for the party, with rare pieces of Chippendale and Georgian furniture set off by hangings and carpets of rich mulberry. Side lights with crystal prisms cast a soft light over the room and the many bouquets sent to the debutantes.

Mr. Alexander received in an orchid-colored lace gown embroidered with silver, and Mrs. Rowan wore a tunic model of silver lame. Miss Alexander wore a frock of delicate white lace over silver tissue, with a bodice trimmed with a bertha collar accentuating the dropped shoulder line. Her bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley was carried in an antique silver filigree holder. Inn the center of the bouquet were deep talisman roses matching the antique coral jewelry she wore around her neck and wrists.

Wears Period Gown.

The tea table was decorated with shades of mulberry, and the following took turns presiding: Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Minister of Hungary; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely, Mrs. Hugh W. Rowan, Mrs. Harold Stark, Mrs. John Biddle, Miss Alys Downing, Mrs. Albert Pepper Gerhard and Mrs. John Meim Carter, the former Miss Elise Alexander, sister of one of the debutantes.

Assisting the debutantes were Miss Valerie Prochnik, Miss Ruth Sowers. Miss Ruth Tuckerman, Miss Gertrude Faust, Miss Stellita Stapleton and Miss Martha Davidge.

Mrs. Carter, who came from her home in Philadelphia several days ago, wore a gown of chartreuse crepe shot with silver, and banded at wrists and neckline with sable. Mrs. Henry W. Fitch, grandmother of Miss Rowan, also came from Philadelphia, where she is passing the winter, to attend the reception.

Another Debutante Makes Bow.

Another debutante also made her bow yesterday when Col. and Mrs. George S. Patton entertained at a dance in the Sulgrave Club to present their daughter, Miss Ruth Patton. Preceding the dance, Mrs. Keith Merrill entertained at dinner for Miss Patton, who is her niece.

Mrs. Patton's nieces, Miss Jean Borden, of South Lincoln, Mass., and Miss Eleanor Harris, of Lowell, Mass., are passing the week-end in Washington, having come to attend the dance. Miss Martha Proctor, of Boston, also was among the out-of-town guests.

Mrs. John Knight Waters, the former Miss Beatrice Patton, arrived from Fort Riley, Kan., where Lieut. Waters is stationed, to attend her sister's debut.

Miss Patton, who like her mother and father, and other members of the family, is an excellent horsewoman, also is an excellent sailor, and during the summer pilots her own boat when at their country home at South Hamilton, Mass. She has won a number of trophies in the boat races at Manchester and Marblehead, Mass.

Crosby Will Leave For Europe Dec. 28

Will Confer in England on World Tribunal.

Mr. Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in the Wison Administration, will sail December 28 for England to remain several months. Mr. Crosby and his youngest daughter, Mrs. Crosby Miller, passed the winter at the Fairfax, as their home, View Tree, near Warrenton, Va., has been leased by Col. Henry Armstead. Mrs. Miller and her father will go to New York next week to pass Christmas with Mrs. Arthur Hornblow, another daughter.

While in England Mr. Crosby will confer with Lord David Davies on a subject which has been of great interest to them both, and about which they have written books—an international tribunal, backed by an international police force which would enforce the decrees of the tribunal.

Elizabeth Houghton Arrives From England

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, daughter of the former United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, and Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, who has been in England, has arrived in New York and is at the Weylin Hotel. She has as her guest Miss Muriel Watson, of London.

Miss Houghton and Miss Watson will come to Washington in a few days to join the former's parents at their home on Massachusetts avenue.

Frelinghuysen Wedding Held In Los Angeles

Announcement has been made of the marriage in Los Angeles Wednesday of Miss Anne de Smolianinoff, daughter of Gen. Vladimir de Smolianinoff and Mme. Olga de Smolianinoff, of Belgrade and New York, formerly of Petrograd, to Mr. G. Griswold Frelinghuysen, of New York, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Frelinghuysen, of Newark, N. J.

News of the marriage comes as a surprise to the many friends of the young couple, as no announcement of a formal engagement had been made. The bride has been residing with friends in Los Angeles while studying at a dramatic art school in that city. Following the ceremony, the young couple informed their families by telegraph. They will be in New York during the holidays.

Mrs. Frelinghuysen's father, who now resides in Belgrade, was state senator in Petrograd and grand master of the imperial court under the late Czar Nicholas. On her paternal side the bride is a cousin of Mrs. John A. Stewart 3d, of Hilholme, Short Hills, N. J., the former Countess Olga de Smolianinoff. Mrs. Frelinghuysen attended a convent in Belgrade and later studied in Paris. Her brother, Mr. Andre de Smolianinoff, a graduate of Princeton, resides with their mother in New York.

Mr. Frelinghuysen is a gradson of the late Mr. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, who was Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Chester A. Arthur. He is a nephew of Mr. George G. Frelinghuysen and Mrs. Charles L. McCawley, of Washington.

He attended Lawrenceville School and Princeton University. Since the death of his parents he has made his home with his sister, Miss Estelle Frelinghuysen, and his brothers, Mr. Frederick Thomas T. K. Frelinghuysen, in New York and at White Wings, the Frelinghuysen estate at Elberon, N. J.

Italy's Renaissance In Africa Is Topic

Dr. Kenneth Scott Talks to Society Today.

This evening the Italian Embassy will be the setting for the second of this season's meetings of the Archeological Society of Washington. Last summer Ambassador Rosso, at the request of Arthur Stanley Riggs, director and secretary of the society, arranged for Dr. Kenneth Scott, professor of Latin at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, to study Italy's success in bringing to life again Rome's former colonies in Africa.

Dr. Scott's illustrated lecture, "Italy's Colonial Renaissance in Northern Africa," will tell of the results of his inspection.

Italian Libya is being developed as a great food-producing region to feed the rapidly increasing population of continental Italy by the application of modern forestry, agriculture and hydraulic engineering. With the economic development, Gov. Gen. Balbo is bringing to light the archeological treasures of this territory.

Receiving with Ambassador Rosso will be the President of the Society and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis.

Mrs. Stokes S. Halkett, who lives at 2112 S street, has rented her house at 2236 Massachusetts avenue to Mrs. Hamilton Wright.

Miss Katharine Augusta Carl, New York artist, is the guest of Col. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown for the week-end.

Admiral McNamee Off To Visit in Annapolis

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Luke McNamee will spend the week-end in Annapolis as the guests of Commander and Mrs. Jesse B. Oldendorf.

Swiss Minister To Confer Degree

Marc Peter to Preside at Dinner in New York.

The Minister of Switzerland, Mr. Marc Peter, has gone to New York to preside at a dinner at the Ambassador Hotel, which will be attended by more than 100 guests, all bearers of academic degrees from Swiss Universities.

He will confer on Prof. Robert Brooks, Joseph Wharton, professor of political science, Swarthmore University, the degree of doctor rerum politicarum honoris causa, conferred upon him by the University of Berne. Prof. Brooks is the author of two standard books, "Government and Politics of Switzerland," and "Civic Training in Switzerland."

Local Shops Replete With Everything Well-Groomed Man Will Look for From Santa

Smart Styling Apparent Even In Accessories

By M. A. Weiss.

BETTER than turning the leaves of your favorite smart magagazine, so far as "boning up" on authentic fashions is concerned, is a tour through the local men's shops and haberdashery departments, replete as they are with everything the well-dressed man has a right to expect in his Christmas sock.

Silk undershirt and handkerchief linen short ensembles are exceedingly smart and make wanted gifts. Besides the color combination illustrated, there are deeptoned blue shirts, with blue polka dot topped trunks, and maroon shirts, with a spittalsfield pattern maroon and grey shorts. The shirts are of elastic ribbed, and the shorts have French backs and banjo seats, providing the maximum of comfort. Incidently, silk in underthings will keep you warmer than wool, and without its bulk.

The new sports motifs applied to robe fabrics should find a way to every man's heart. Blanket robes made of famous racing colors, silk robes with polo designs, a short robe resembling a mackinaw of a silky felted material, are all new notes.

Slippers in Varied Styles.

Slippers come in for their share of attention. It is wise to choose those with soles and heels, since they promote foot comfort. These run the gamut from mules, operas, fausts, booties and pumps to traveling slippers. Snakeskin is particularly smart and soft. Morocco and glazed kid come in for their share of applause. I particularly like a patent leather slipper resembling a dress pump lined with quilted red satin.

The sandal craze of last summer is evident in the influence of slipper styles. Espadrilles, those tied cloth sandals with rope soles made famous by the French Foreign Legion, are handy things to own. They do not slip on waxed or wet tile floors.

Even bath towels come in for their share of smart styling. There is a combination of a real man's towels (large enough to wrap your entire body, and just rough enough to start a glow) made in the most attractive color combinations. These have with them bath mits of terry cloth with a little snap pocket to contain the soap. No more groping for soap and when you rub your mit-covered hands over back and chest . . . it's a grand and glorious feeling. There's a thought for a Christmas gift for every man from 6 to 60.

Invisible Suspender.

Have you seen the invisible suspender? It's quite an idea. Put on under the shirt, it suspends trousers perfectly, holds the shirt in place and at the same time can not be seen.

Garters, braces and belts come in for their share of high fashion. Pigskin, buttonless ends and new jewelry ideas run riot. I like the suspender that clips onto your trouser. Another favorite is the type with clips to hold your shirt down. Regimental stripes will always be in good taste, and you can obtain these in elastic, silks and even colored leathers.

All the foregoing are most attractively packaged in boxes that have a utility purpose. Ingenius are the bakelite cigarette holder, the turned wood tobacco jar, the desk calendar, the photograph frame, the pen and pencil desk set, and a host of others all containing a gift item of tie clasp set, or garter, suspender or belt.

Lighters, too, are following fashion. The hounds up whose whimsical nose you scratch for a light and the wafer thin lighter no bigger than a modern watch, come in for consideration not only because of their smartness, but because they work and because there are few parts to get out of order. The evening ensemble of black enamel and chrome cigarette case and lighter is practical because they can be stowed away without tell-tale bulges.

Kid's Games Popular.

Did you ever see a man that didn't like kid's games (even though he won't admit it)? This Christmas he can satisfy his yen. In fact, if this weather keeps up, many a hostess will take these games and use them for entertaining guests. There's the horse-race game, operating with a string and pellet shot that makes fixing a race impossible; a dart game that calls for skill and a clear eye, and your old favorites of roulette, bagatelle, ping-pong and anagrams, in interesting adult versions of youngsters' hobbies.

Smoker's accessories and cocktail things are suitably fashioned to give extra performance. Pipes have flat bottoms and new "air-cooling" systems (so they can be left around without causing trouble). Shakers with four compartments . . . three for mixing three different cocktails at once and the fourth for holding the ice (no dilution). Just the thing for the bachelor apartment.

String gloves with telemark designs have companion pieces in sox and reefers to match—a practical and smart gift. If he owns a car, especially an open one, he'll appreciate getting that.

The chap surveying his gifts is wearing a wool robe known as "horse-sheeting," the pattern being taken from the racing blankets of famous stables. His silk undershirt is a rich brown coffee color, and his shorts are canary with a brown and yellow glen top. His slippers are of snakeskin lined with rabbit. The gadget on the top is a modern lighter that goes for months without refilling. The automatic pencil has a concealed lighter at the end opposite the lead. The tiny, compact lighter actually performs with just a flip of the finger. Scratch the hound dog's nose and you get a light. This belt of calf with jewelry buckle is packed in a handsome copper finish cigarette box and the modernistic bakelite box is useful as a cigarette container after the belt is removed. Smart Washington shops carry these items.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

IF DECEMBER 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

Social activities are very likely to receive a great deal more consideration and thought on this December 15 than business. Money will be freely circulated; mostly, however, in places providing entertainment or food. It might pay you to throw aside all sense of financial cares and responsibilities, so as to relax mentally as well as physically. Diversion on this day will probably enable you to face the coming week with a renewed vigor and clarity of thought.

If a woman and December 15 is your birthday, you are not very much inclined to worry, which happy faculty will enable you to face most issues successfully. Your mental attitude should bring you a great deal of happiness.

If a man and December 15 is your natal day, you have the ability to accomplish whatever you undertake, even if it requires a good deal of patience and time. You are at times inclined to place too much confidence in strangers. Artistic, beautiful things appeal to you. Be careful your very good taste does not lead you to become supercritical, for it might cause a very dear friend to become offended. Love may to some extent dominate your personal affairs, but it will be worthwhile making any sacrifice you might be required to make.

Tattoo Vogue Reveals Girls' Favored Swain

IT'S THE WOMAN who pays and pays for impulsiveness.

For the last year or so a good many members of the so-called fair sex out West have been having their boy friends' names tattooed on their shoulders. This is all very sweet and romantic until the lady gets tired of the boy-friend. Then she finds that although she can get rid of him she can't dismiss his name from her shoulder so lightly. The only thing she can do is to have it covered with a floral design, something in the way of rosebuds or forget-me-nots.

One Denver woman has sixteen bunches of posies tattooed on her shoulder. Under every bunch is the name of a former swain. There is likely to be another bunch any minute as a man's name is now inscribed beneath the rows of flowers.

Although women in general are becoming more interested in tattooing than ever, most of them want the simple, inexpensive things such as hearts or anchors at 25 cents each. It's been a long, long time since anybody asked for 'Cleopatra at the Bath," a $150 job, a leading tattoo exponent told the Associated Press recently.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Harmless Heart Murmurs.

HEART murmurs that do not mean heart disease may be detected in a considerable number of children. A clear recognition of this situation is important in order to avoid condemning to invalidism certain children who should be active participants in normal, healthful play. If a diagnosis of heart disease is made upon insufficient evidence parents are unnecessarily alarmed and their anxiety is certain to be reflected in the child's attitude and outlook.

It has been stated that nearly 10 per cent of all children have heart murmurs at some period before reaching the age of puberty. Fortunately, only a small percentage of these murmurs indicate true heart disease.

It sometimes happens that in the course of a general illness heart murmurs are detected. They may not be due to disease of the heart itself, but may arise because of changes in the blood and the character of the contraction of the heart muscle. Careful physicians are usually able to distinguish between murmurs that arise from true heart disease and those that come from conditions that may be disregarded. Murmurs that are not attended with heart disease are called functional or benign, and usually disappear when the health returns to normal or, in children, with normal growth.

Physicians recognize that slight murmurs heard at the time of the first sound rarely indicated organic heart disease, but too often a bad prognosis is made and the patient and his family are frightened. It is conceded that these murmurs need to be studied, but more often than not they will be found to be functional and not organic.

Heart disease may exist without the slightest trace of a murmur and even with normal heart sounds, for example, in thyroid disease, in disease of the coronary vessels of the heart, and in angina pectoris. Sometimes murmurs heard over the heart area are not of heart origin at all, but are due to movements of air in the lungs occasioned by the contraction of the heart.

Common sense dictates that the best management of a functional heart murmur is to let it alone. As a precaution, however, foci of infection should be removed and if anemia is present means must be adopted to combat this condition. In other words, attention must be given to good hygiene. Most important of all, these persons must not be made mental invalids because of supposed organic disease. The heart requires no treatment, but the individual may require building up by the reestablishment of an appropriate routine of living.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion without being foppish is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Soft Collar With Tuxedo.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Can I wear a soft, lay-down collar on a dress shirt with a double-breasted tuxedo? A. V. M.

• • • •

SIR: If you are wearing a dress shirt, and the collar matches, I would say it is permissible. Of course, you mean a semisoft, non-wilt collar.

Maroon Carnation Wanted.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Where can you get the maroon carnation made of feathers you mentioned in your column of last week? L. N.

• • • •

SIR: A self-addressed stamped envelope is required for the answer to that one.

What About Slide Fasteners?

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: You are a wonderful help in your column even to us who do not write in for advice. Of all the letters, none has appealed to me like that of "Alice D." Those who have unkind selfish husbands know that things can not be talked over quietly or at all. He will either walk out or go into a rage. Consulting a third party will cause more unbridled wrath.

• • • •

Dear "Alice D.", you were educated in a convent. Have you never thought of prayer, Look up Matt. 5:44. Part of this verse is, "Pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." Do this both for your husband and for the woman who annoy you. You will feel withdrawn and a great peace will fill your soul. This reacts on others because the suppressed hostility has gone out of your own heart.

• • • •

Mary Pickford has suffered and found there was no earthly help for her hurt. I would like you to get her book, "Why Not Try God?" In it she writes, "My discovery was so wonderful and has brought me so much joy, given me so much spiritual light in the hardest hours of my life, that I want to share it with all who care to try it."

• • • •

"Alice D.," you were married at 19 and now are only 30. May you find peace in your heart. I was married at 29—to the wrong man—and am now 54. It has taken me 25 years to find this great peace, to take the place of resentment, hurt and rebellion.

SYMPATHIZER.

A Gracious Thought.

DEAR SYMPATHIZER: Thank you for your gracious letter. Your suggestion for "Alice D." contains a profound thought too often overlooked by moderns in search of the strength to endure and to overcome. I am sure she will appreciate your sympathy and understanding, and I hope she may find it possible to develop a sustaining philosophy and acceptance akin to yours. M. H.

2 G. O. P. Leaders Agree On Everything But Peace

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

TWO WOMEN, prominent in political and social life, arrived in Washington yesterday. Each, a national committeewoman in the Republican organization, was unaware of the other's visit. Separately, they discussed politics, economics, feminism, youth movements and peace. They agreed on everything but peace.

Mrs. Murray Boocock, large estate owner and socialite of Kiswick, Va., is an ardent pacifist. Mrs. Paul FitzSimons, the former Mrs. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, of Newport, is a preparedness advocate.

"Pacifism is often an excuse for lack of patriotism," declared the auburn-haired, gray-eyed Mrs. FitzSimons. "When a people become so anesthetized by propaganda that they are willing to ignore threats to national honor, then it is time to do something about it. Preparedness? Of course I believe in it!"

Assails Administration.

The picture of munitions makers and international bankers engineering war was ridiculed by the former Elsie French Vanderbilt.

"It is part of the present popular misconception that all people in high places are crooks and villains," she said.

Mrs. FitzSimons, whose son, Senator Vanderbilt, of New York, entered the World War at 16, youngest commissioned officer in the Naval Reserve, deplored what she described as a "persistent and deliberate attempt on the part of politically minded leaders to break down the patriotism and loyalty inherent in American youth."

Mrs. Boocock's Views Differ.

Mrs. Boocock, with a commanding personality and lively hazel eyes, had a different view of the peace question.

"Education," she said, "is the only weapon with which to counteract war propaganda and other false doctrines. When we learn who pulls the strings behind the scenes, we get a different slant of the show."

An ardent and tireless sponsor of youth in Virginia, Mrs. Boocock, whose lovely estate, Castalia, is noted for its philanthropic hospitality, is enthusiastic over the future for young men and women in her party.

"The sooner we learn to trust youth with political responsibility, the happier it will be for all concerned," she said at the University Women's Club, where she had luncheon with Mrs. Ellis Yost, director of the women's division, Republican national committee, and a group of other friends.

"The young people today are sincere in their efforts to find a way out of the economic chaos caused by the depression. They do not ask for the whole stage. They are eager to cooperate with older heads if given a chance. It is the latter who, too often jealous of their own threatened positions, do not give them opportunity to prove their value."

Urges Caution in Feminism.

Feminism? Mrs. FitzSimons believes it can be carried to extremes. She observed that the best interests politically and sociologically were effected by cooperation of men and women, rather than by both going their separate ways.

"Women are beginning to realize that politics is not a thing apart from the business of living," she said. "It is not a hobby that should be taken up and laid down according to whim.

"The way to clean up politics," she continued, "is to improve the caliber of men in smaller places—the town and county offices. Too often, all effort ceases when a man at the top has been exposed as a crook. Sometimes he is made the goat for general corruption. Practically, it doesn't do any good to stop at removing the icing when the whole political cake is rotten."

Mrs. Boocock spent part of her brief visit in Washington purchasing gifts with which to play Santa Claus to two groups in Keswick. One includes the 100 children and teachers in a rural school district near Charlottesville, the other, the large staff of servants and their children on her estate.

Political Study Club to Hold Frolic Today

Each Member To Donate Toy For Distribution Among The Poor

A YULETIDE atmosphere will prevail at the annual Christmas frolic of the Political Study Club at 2:30 p. m. today in the Washington Club.

Each member will bring a toy and deposit it under the Christmas tree. These toys will be distributed later among poor children of the District.

Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parks will open the meeting by leading the members in the salute to the flag. Under the supervision of Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer, a musical program will be given. Dr. Robert Howe Harmon will conduct the George Washington University Glee Club, with Frederick Denniston, tenor soloist, in a number of selections.

A dramatic recital will be given by Miss Janet Coon in costume. Miss Marjorie Webster, with three of her pupils, will present Miss Margaret Plummer in a Christmas reading; Miss Doris Haines in a short sketch, and Miss Elizabeth Cryer in a dramatic reading.

Following the entertainment Mrs. Frank M. Shortall, president, assisted by committee chairmen, will receive the members and guests in the drawing room, where tea will be served. Officers of the club will preside at the tea tables.

Cocktail Party Planned.

The guests of honor will be Miss Elizabeth Fountain, Miss Catherine Nalley, Miss Betty Fainter, Miss Marie Brown, Miss Eve Allen, Miss Catherine Cammack, Miss Mary Schellenburg and Miss Madelyn Holt.

The North Carolina Society of Washington will hold a dance at 9 o'clock tonight in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. All members of the society and friends, as well as all North Carolinians in the city, are invited.

Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Gamma, graduate sorority of George Washington University, will give a breakfast at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Hay-Adams House. Miss Elsie Green will be hostess.

A special meeting to elect officers and discuss plans for the coming year will be held by the Indiana Society at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the caucus room of the old House Office Building.

The annual Christmas luncheon of the Phi Delta Delta legal sorority will be held at 1 p. m. today at the Women's City Club. The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Miss Gertrude Coyle, Miss Pearl Cooper, Miss Vera Jones, Miss Clara L. Noyes, Miss Anne Christine Moe, Miss Nila Allen, and Miss Lois Gates Gorman.

Sigma Alpha Kappa will hold its second annual dance tomorrow night at the Arlington Hotel. The committee in charge of arrangements includes Mitchell Sklar, Max Jeweler and Maurice Gurwitz.

Church Queries Mount, Says New York Hotel

Traveling America is becoming more church-minded since repeal, if the experiences of a big New York hotel are any indication. When prohibition was in effect the hotel's hospitality desk received an average of 12 inquries every Saturday night concerning places where drinks could be bought. Now there is an average of 15 questions regarding church services. One reason the questions about liquor have dwindled is that noboby has to ask where a drink may be bought today, the hospitality desk pointed out.

Place to Dine That Meets All Tests Is Found

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WANTED, by busy housewives, a dining room where the prices are reasonable, the food excellent and the setting conducive to rest.

Wanted, by hungry husbands, a dining room where the helpings are bounteous and the service efficient.

An organization which for ten years has catered to a large clientele on Capitol Hill has taken over a restaurant on lower Connecticut avenue. As you peer in from the street you see a large room which impresses you first of all with its cleanliness and air of calm and quiet. What you don't see, however, is the rear dining room. Here Chinese red walls are combined with silvery green side benches to give warmth and color to modernistic treatment. Venetian blinds in a large window filter in a soft light.

On each shiny black table, aluminum or chrome lamps shaped like small umbrellas cast a subdued glow. You feel miles away from anywhere and are utterly content as you light your cigarette and settle back on your pillowed wall seat.

Suppose you dropped in for luncheon. If you're ravenous you may order a he-man meal for 50 cents. This would begin with soup and carry through to desert. It's called luncheon but it's really a dinner. On the other hand if you're hungry but not that hungry there's a 35-cent luncheon which includes meat, vegetables, beverage, breads and dessert.

Here's an example taken at random from one day: a choice of pan broiled liver, onions, and fresh kale; baked chicken pastry hash, cream gravy, baked hubbard squash; a vegetable plate with three vegetables. That's the main course. Now from a long list of homemade breads you take your choice. Tea, coffee, or milk? Ice cream or lemon whip? All this, mind you for 35 cents!

Now There's Gold Ice.

Some time ago when silver ice trays, artistically designed metal affairs which you use for chilling drinks), first made its debut in local shops it spelled luxury in no uncertain terms. But now comes frosted, gold ice, which looks like luxury itself.

You use it the same way. Put it in the tray of your icebox and leave it a couple of hours. It's ready then for your highballs, or even wine and beer. It will bring a beverage to the proper temperature but doesn't dilute the contents.

Lovely Trays Offered.

Everyone would like a genuine Sheffield tray but unfortunately it isn't everyone who can buy one. For those many who can't, a downtown gift department offers reproductions of these lovely trays for a minimum price. In this instance, it's hard to decide whether you'd rather give or receive.

Season's Candy Pleases.

As a general thing children like all kinds of candy, but they particularly like that sold especially for them this season at a downtown store. There are lollypops dressed like little girls and boys, and great big all-day-sucker Santa Clauses of chocolate, as well as candy Christmas trees. One big success is the pirate box which contains not only a candy Capt. Kidd, but candy guns and flags and gold pieces. Another favorite is zoological. It has candy animals from the lion to the elephant and a liberal sprinkling of colorful gumdrops.

Other boxes cater to childish tastes with chocolate cigarettes, stick candy and nutty caramels. They are all mildly priced and beautifully packaged.

Egyptian Cotton Tablecloths.

Egyptian cotton went into the making of the silky looking tablecloths displayed now in the linen department of a downtown store. They have so much luster and shine that it's hard to believe they aren't silk damask, but it seems they are cotton mixed with rayon, and are especially processed to give them a lovely sheen.

These are available in eggshell and ivory, hemstitched or with handturned hems.

Dressing Table Sets.

For the dressing table there are few things lovelier than one of the sets displayed now in a local shop. It includes two cologne or perfume bottles, a powder jar and a mirror reflector. Shoppers who have bought such sets before will be astonished that these are only $1.

Even women who prefer their dressing tables plain and free from ornament will be delighted at the dressed-up air these sets lend. They are handy, too. When guests come they appreciate having cologne and perfume to choose from, and a powder box within easy reach.

Boy's Outfit.

An outfit for a little boy, and only $3.95! It sounds too good to be true. But a downtown store offers a sweater with basque stripes, broadcloth shirt and flannel trousers for this unusually low price.

These Blouses Are Smart Additions to Wardrobe

Pattern No. 834.

BLOUSES ARE no longer "something to wear with a suit." They have stepped into the spotlight as vitally important parts of every well behaved wardrobe.

The seven-eighths length blouse of satin appears at all hours of the afternoon—and looks comfortable all through an informal evening. It is a veritable life-saver for the girl who works and hasn't time to go home and dress before dinner.

The shorter overblouse, with its soft high cowl and slim straight sleeves, looks very "this year" and is unobtrusively smart. It would be charming if made of moire.

Both these blouses come in one pattern and are available in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 42.

Forestalling a Throw-in.

In the perfect forced lead situation both defensive players are stripped of trumps and the declarer is thus certain, that the player to be thrown in can not use a low trump as an exit card. There are times however when lack of trump length in dummy prevents the declarer from completely attaining this situation. He then is forced, as South was in the hand below, to hope for an additional lucky break. If one trump has to be left outstanding, the end-play may still materialize if the opponent who is thrown in does not happen to have this missing card with which he could exit. On this hand, however, even though the distribution was just as the declarer had hoped, the other opponent forestalled the end-play by deliberately trumping his partner's good trick, getting the latter out of an embarrassing situation.

South, Dealer
North-South vulnerable

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♣	2NT	Pass
3◇	Pass	4♠(1)	Pass
4NT	Pass	5NT(2)	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A rather optimistic bid.
2—North has one Ace and the Kings of all bid suits. Hence the conventional five-notrump response.

Against the six-spade contract West opened the club King. South immediately realized that fulfilling his contract would not be easy, as the heart King seemed to be definitely wrong on the bidding. He consequently decided to play for a possible forced lead from West.

South won the first trick with the club Ace in dummy and immediately led a low club and trumped it. Next he drew two rounds of trumps and then shifted to diamonds, basing his plan of campaign on his only chance—the probability that West had only two trumps. The first diamond was won in South's own hand and the second with dummy's Jack. When West showed out and yet did not trump, South began to feel more hopeful. He now led the Jack of Clubs from dummy with the intention of discarding his low heart, thus forcing West to win the trick and compelling either a heart lead into his tenace or a club lead which would give him a ruff and discard.

The East player, however, did not fall asleep merely because he had a near Yarborough, as a great many players are wont to do. He spotted the situation which South was developing and immediately realized that his partner would soon be in difficulties. Therefore, despite the fact that he knew his partner held the high club, he deliberately trumped in with his remaining spade. The declarer's carefully laid plans were completely broken up. South was forced to overtrump and, after reentering dummy by overtaking his last trump, to depend on the heart finesse. On the low heart lead East, of course, put up the nine spot and South's Queen was captured by West's King. South was then forced to concede another heart trick to the opponents and his contract was defeated at a result of West's very fine counter-attack.

Contest Seeks Candy Recipes; Prizes Offered

HERE IS news that will interest those who enjoy making candy. The Post's recipe contest next week will be devoted to recipes for any kind of candy. Surely, you are planning to make several batches of your favorite candy for the Christmas holidays.

Which do you consider your best never-fail recipe? Perhaps you have an unusual one for the Nation's favorite confection. Anyhow, send in your favorite candy recipe next week, because it may win a prize.

All recipes should be sent to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Three prizes will be awarded: $3 for the best recipe, $2 for the second best, and $1 for the third best.

All recipes should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

TO TEASE or not to tease, was the question asked readers in this column recently. When children torment each other is it an unadulterated evil, or does it fit them to "stand the gaff" in later life?

Mrs. A. B. Trowbridge, of 3017 N street northwest, who has reared a family successfully herself, thinks that a system a relative of hers employed had much to recommend it.

"The article on teasing," she writes, "makes me think of a great uncle of mine who brought up a brilliant family, but his table was bedlam. He let his children quarrel for the unusual reason that he firmly believed that 'fighting strengthens muscles, and bickering strengthens wits.' In his family, the exercise of both gave famous results."

Comments of other readers are invited!

Steam Pudding For Christmas Leads Recipes

Miss Dorothy Nalley Wins First Prize of $3 in The Post's Contest.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT WILL be steamed pudding for Christmas dinner this year, according to the number of recipes for this type of dessert received this week in The Post's contest.

First prize, $3, is awarded to Miss Dorothy Nalley, of Winchester, Va., for her recipe for steamed ginger pudding with strawberry sauce. Second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. Frank T. Hurley, 6309 Seventh street northwest, for her recipe for macaroon pudding, and third prize, $1, to Miss Aldeane Marchand, of Hyattsville, for her recipe for Pickwick's Christmas pudding.

Honorable mention is awarded Mrs. J. E. Hall, of Clifton Forge, Va., for her recipe for fig pudding; to Mrs. Ethel Morganston, 4417 Illinois avenue northwest, for her recipe for fruit custard; Miss Edna Zemer, Benjamin Franklin Station, for her recipe for sweet potato pudding, and to Mrs. George Gant, 4007 Connecticut avenue, for her recipe for chocolate dessert.

Steamed Ginger Pudding.

1-3 cup butter
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups flour
1 cup evaporated milk
2 teaspoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons ginger
¼ cup chopped preserved ginger
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream butter and sugar. Add well-beaten eggs. Add sifted, dry ingredients alternately with the evaporated milk, which has been diluted with the water. Add preserved ginger. Steam in greased and tightly covered pans for one hour. Serve with the following sauce:

Strawberry Sauce.

½ cup strawberry preserves
1 egg white
½ cup butter
1 cup confectioner's sugar

Cream butter. Add sugar slowly and continue creaming. Fork in lightly the preserves. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white and chill.

Macaroon Pudding.

3 eggs
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons gelatin
12 maraschino cherries
½ cup water
½ cup wine or claret
½ pound almonds
1½ dozen macaroons

Combine the egg yolks, sugar and water and heat to the boiling point to make a custard. Add gelatin, which has been soaked in half-cup cold water.

Place nuts, cherries and macaroons, which have been crushed, into a large serving dish. Add wine or claret. Cover this with a meringue made from the egg whites. Then add the hot custard. Do not stir. Chill in the refrigerator and serve with whipped cream.

Pickwick's Christmas Pudding.

1 cup currants
1 cup raisins
1 cup shredded almonds
1 cup chopped suet
1 cup sherry
4 eggs
1½ cups brown sugar
1 nutmeg
2 cups figs, shredded
1 cup shredded citron
½ cup orange marmalade
1 cup flour
3 cups stale bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder

Wash currants and raisins, combine fruit, nuts, suet and flour sifted with salt, soda, nutmeg and baking powder. Mix well and add crumbs and sugar. Beat eggs until thick, add to first mixture with sherry and marmalade. Mix all ingredients thoroughly and turn into a well-oiled mold. Cover with parchment paper and tie securely and steam for five hours.

Fig Pudding.

¼ pound suet
½ pound brown sugar
¼ nutmeg, grated
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 eggs
½ cup milk

Chop the figs and suet fine, add the bread crumbs, sugar and nutmeg and mix well. Sift and add flour, salt and baking powder, and moisten with the well-beaten eggs and milk. Turn into a greased pudding mold, cover and boil for four hours. Serve with either hard or liquid sauce.

Fruit Custard.

1 medium can drained pineapple (diced)
1 pound small white seedless or seeded grapes
½ pound almonds (blanched)

For Custard.

2-3 cup milk
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten

Heat milk in double boiler, then add cornstarch which has been mixed with a little milk. Pour a little of this mixture on the egg yolks, then stir egg yolks into hot mixture in the boiler. Continue stirring and cooking until custard coats the spoon. Cool slightly. Mix pineapple, grapes, almonds and marshmallows and pour custard over them. Let stand in refrigerator at least 12 hours before serving. Serves eight.

Four Canadian Buffalo Cross Ocean on Liner

Special quarters were provided on the liner Kosciusko recently for four Canadian buffalo voyaging to Poland. The fur-covered passengers with names of Jean, Joan, Lillian and William Douglas, embarked at Montreal. They had come from Wainright National Park, Alberta. Their new home will be in the national park at Janen, Poland.

SHY CINDERELLA

By WILSON COLLISON

Jimmy Grenville, wealthy young man whose wife is divorcing him because he is too serious-minded, has advertised for a mother and daughter to keep house for him. Anne, a jobless chorus girl, applies for the job and tells him she has a mother. She plans to force her roommate, also out of work, to play that role.

ANNE said naively, in answer to Grenville's question, "We've never worked before in New York."

"I see," said Jimmie. "Of course, it would be better if you had references."

"I know it would," said Anne a little tragically. "But we haven't. We're honest, though. We won't steal."

Pleaded for a Trial.

Anne was conscious of the dramatic silence; she knew that she hung in the balance.

She said quickly, leaning toward the desk with her hands clasped in her lap, "If you'll just try us, Mr. Grenville, we'll work a week for nothing to prove to you that we'll take wonderful care of your house."

Jimmie felt a little tug at his heart again; it annoyed him and made him want to swear; here he was wasting time with a girl he knew he could not conscientiously and safely employ; here he was sitting at his desk gazing at her and saying over and over to himself, "She's the prettiest thing I've ever seen. What's her game?"

He got up and walked to the window and stood looking out with his broad back to her. Anne instinctively knew when to keep still and she kept very still; she scarcely breathed.

Would Work Hard.

"I love a nice home," said Anne so simply that Jimmie stared at her in utter silence for a long time.

He asked, "How much will the two of you work for?"

Anne's heart came into her mouth. "Will we get our room and board?"

Jimmie looked at her quizzically; he smiled. "Oh, yes, you'll get a suite of rooms and all you can eat."

Anne said seriously, "Then you can pay us anything you like."

He said, "I'll pay you $150 a month."

"Thank you," said Anne, suppressing a little gasp. "Will you want to see my mother before you hire us?"

Needed by Friday.

He said, "I don't think that will be necessary. I'm giving a party Friday night. You'd better come out at nine in the morning. Miss Jepson will give you the address. When you get to the station you'll have to take a taxi." He sat down and drew a telephone toward him.

Anne stood for a moment looking at him; she said, "We'll be there, Mr. Grenville. Thank you!"

She went across toward the door. She had abruptly averted her head, but not before Jimmie had seen the glint of tears in her eyes.

She went through the door.

Jimmie sat staring at the door.

A Complete Fool.

He lighted a cigarette. He had just made a complete fool of himself.

Colin and Shirley would have him placed under observation when they heard of it.

He had hired the prettiest girl he had ever seen to be a maid in his house and she was going to bring along her mother to do the cooking.

What if they stole all the silverware and fine linen?

Well, what if they did? He might at least get some amusement out of it, and the insurance company would have to stand the loss. That was why he carried insurance, so that a pretty girl could steal if she happened to be that kind of maid.

Jimmie said, looking at his desk, "I'll clean up all this business today."

Amazing Announcement.

Back at their boarding house Lillian had climbed the stairs, puffing a little and was walking through the hall when Anne came running toward her, crying, "Lillian, where have you been! I've waited hours for you. Lillian, I thought you'd never come back!"

Lillian caught Anne and stared into her face, a little alarmed. "What's the matter, baby? Has anything happened?"

Anne gasped, "Yes, yes, yes! We both have jobs."

"Have mercy," said Lillian. "And get back into the suite."

"Have we joined a circus?" Lillian asked.

A Nice Man, Too——

Anne was looking at her; she was smiling; she seemed like an eager, excited child. "I don't know what you'll say, Lillian. I was just desperate. I didn't know what else to do. I went to see a man who wanted a cook and a maid for his house on Long Island. I had a terrible time seeing him. He's a nice man, and young. He's handsome, too. He advertised for a mother and daughter to take charge of his house, and oh, Lillian, I told him you were my mother."

Lillian said very gravely with a smile, "Well, I am your mother."

"I told Mr. Grenville I was an experienced maid and that you were a cook. Lillian, can you really cook?"

Must Try Hard.

"Don't worry. I'll go down to a department store and get a cookbook before we go to work. Show me a room and plenty to eat for a week and I'll cook anything from soup to nuts and make them like it. Has this man got a wife?"

"I don't know anything about him."

"I don't get along with wives, but I'll do my best."

"Lillian, we get a suite of rooms all to ourselves, all we can eat and $150 a month."

"A hundred and fifty a month?"

"Yes. I didn't ask for it, he offered it to me."

"Suppose we don't last a month?"

"We'll have to. We've got to succeed. It will be lovely to live in a nice house on Long Island."

"I knew we'd get there before we died."

"We'll have to work hard, Lillian. We'll have to show Mr. Grenville that we really appreciate our jobs."

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

FOOTLOOSE spooks and other horrendous things said to cause goose-pimples may all be explained on a material basis.

To demonstrate this and assure the radio audience that creakings, clankings, groanings and moanings are mere commonplace things, C. B. S., with the aid of Dr. E. E. Free and his gadget-filled laboratories, will stage a feature broadcast today at 7:30 p. m. from New York's famous Flatiron Building, temporarily converted into a haunted house.

The broadcast is second in the "Sounds of Silence" series in which the prominent scientist is demonstrating his sound microscope, which magnifies noise 10,000 billion times.

Long interested in stories about ghosts, Dr. Free will attempt to illustrate that wind whistling through wire screens, the grating of hinges, the creaking and cracking of woodwork under temperature changes, dripping of water, scraping of a tree-limb on a roof—all can be explained through his sound microscope.

Dr. Free hopes, through this broadcast, to obtain from listeners much more material for his packing cases labeled "Ghost Yarns."

* * * *

JOHN SHELLIE, one of Washington's most versatile character actors, has joined N. B. C.'s local staff as assistant to Shannon Allen, production manager, it was announced yesterday.

Mr. Shellie will aid in general production of dramatic programs and will have charge of transcriptions, sound effects and script.

A former stage manager for Richard Mantell, the great Shakespearean actor, Mr. Shellie owns that player's personal ring, given to him at the latter's death. He was associate director for "Headlines of Yesterday," sponsored by The Post, appeared in "Little Women," "Crime Stories of Washington," the Betty Lane shopping series as Cannonball, and as Nucleus in "The Addled Allens," N. B. C. Southeast net show. He was also a member of the Willard Roof Players.

Shellie, incidentally, will start a new series tomorrow at 8:45 a. m. on WMAL, in which he will read Post comics in character as a special children's feature.

ETHEL BARRYMORE, movie star, who made her air debut over C. B. S. two years ago, will join her "royal" brother, Lionel, during that network's holiday broadcast featuring marathon parties on Christmas and New Year's Day.

She will be heard in several of her noted stage characterizations during the New Year's Day party. Others appearing before a C. B. S. mike on Christmas Day from 2:30 to 5:15 p. m. in New York, Chicago and Hollywood will be Alexander Woollcott, as master of ceremonies; Mme. Schumann-Heink, George Olsen's orchestra, Ethel Shutta, and others. Lionel Barrymore will make his mike debut acting the role of Scrooge in a dramatization of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

HORACE HUNNICUTT'S WMAL "Getter-Upper" morning spot is currently contributing a number of "surefire" acts for Thursday night appearances on the Fox stage. No less than eight acts, previously heard by listeners on Hunnicutt's program, have nearly "stopped the show" during subsequent appearances on stage. One James Farrell in particular, "went over" last Thursday night.

"Station Breaks."

N. B. C.'s current "Let's Dance" Saturday night band music blast, now heard on the red network for three hours, will be turned loose on N. B. C.'s red and blue nets, a total of almost 80 stations, on New Year's Eve. This means, we fear, that everyone, everywhere, will have all the dance music they possibly can want as the New Year creeps in after midnight. C. B. S. special events department, guided by the skilful ministrations of Paul White, has dispatched a representative to Callander, Ontario to supervise the December 20 broadcast from the hospital now occupied by the Dionne infants . . . Roxy's Gang will stage an imaginary visit tonight to Broadway's leading musical comedies with outstanding hit tunes by his vocalists at 8 p. m. on WJSV . . . WOL carries today at 9:30 p. m. that famous thriller, "The Shadow Behind the Throne," presented by the American Opʳy House, featuring rousing scenes from the 1902 Boxer Rebellion in China . . . The famous Roth String Quartet of Budapest will offer premieres of two instrumental compositions today on the Library of Congress musicale at 4:30 p. m. on WJSV . . . Helen Richey, noted girl endurance flier, will tell of her aviation experiences today on WOL as guest of Lieut. Jim Hays during the latter's program at 7 p. m.

Fan Fell on His Head, Man Sues for $10,000

Pierce P. Marston, customer's man for the investment house of Hemphill-Noyes Co., in the Shoreham Building, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to award him $10,000 because of injuries he suffered when an electric fan fell from a wall bracket and landed on his head.

Through the law firm of Fischer, Bendheim & Fischer, Marston said he was at his desk in the Shoreham Building last June, when, without warning, the fan toppled from a shelf and struck him. The suit named the Shoreham Investment Co. as the defendant.

Fur Truck Is Looted.

H. Zirkin, furrier of 821 Fourteenth street northwest, reported to police yesterday that garments valued at $623 were stolen from his delivery truck, which was parked near Fourteenth and Fairmont streets northwest.

Fireman Is Overcome In Apartment Blaze

An early morning fire at the Chastleton Apartments yesterday routed more than 100 residents from their rooms after a second alarm had been rung as a precautionary measure. Lieut. Joseph Suit, of No. 1 Engine Co., was overcome by smoke in fighting the basement blaze.

Origin of the fire, which occurred in a basement storeroom, was not determined. Damage was estimated at $150. Residents were alarmed by the fire bells in the building, which rang until the wires were cut.

In Need? Friend Indeed, But He Cost Man $42

Patrick Curley, 30, a worker at the Agricultural Adjustment Administration took his friends' advice and paid no attention to eight traffic tickets he received. Judge John P. McMahon in Traffic Court yesteday vetoed that counsel when he fined Curley $42.

Curley pleaded guilty. Judge McMahon fined him $2 on the first charge, $3 on the second, $4 on the third, and so on up through the eight charges.

Traffic Hazards Cut To One in Southwest

Southwest Washington now has only one dangerous crossing at which there is no traffic signal light, William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, said yesterday, when he announced the operation of a signal at Twelfth and D streets.

The last dangerous intersection, Van Duzer said, is where Maryland avenue, Seventh and D streets come together.

6 Oystermen Will Protest Treatment

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—Fined $54.60 each for taking oysters under the legal size, six Maryland Eastern Shore watermen planned today to lodge a vigorous protest against treatment they said they had received.

Reese Lewis, of Hoopers Island, spokesman for the group, said a complaint would be lodged with Swepson Earle, State consvervation commissioner.

"We received the worst treatment I ever heard of," said Lewis. "They are taking it out on us for what others have done.

"We are going to make a vigorous protest. The whole Eastern Shore will take it up through its representatives."

Left High and Dry.

Lewis complained particularly that he and his companions had not been furnished transportation by the State from Leonardtown back to their boat at Rock Point, 36 miles away. They with seven Virginia oystermen were arrested early yesterday when three Maryland State conservation boats swooped down upon them off Swan's Point in the restricted Cedar Point area.

After their boat was pulled up at Rock Point, the Marylanders were taken before Magistrate James Lathan Bushwood, where they pleaded guilty of having small oysters in their boat. They were then brought in the police boat to Leonardtown to pay their fines.

The police boat left yesterday before all their fines had been arranged, and the oystermen complained that they had to pay transportation charges of $2 each to get back to their work boat. They held the State, after bringing them here, should transport them the 36 miles back to their boat.

Slightly Undersize.

Although they pleaded guilty to having undersize oysters, Lewis protested against the charges brought against them. He said their license gave them the right to oyster anywhere in the Potomac River, and that they did not know there were any restrictions around the Cedar Point area. He also asserted the oysters they had taken were "only slightly undersize."

The six men seized by the police boats were, in addition to Lewis, Edgar Ledmun, A. D. Heddaway, William Roe, Hilda Fairbanks and M. Ledmun, all of Tilghmans Island.

The Virginia watermen arrested were turned over to authorities of that State. Capt. John Smith, commander of the conservation police boat Pocomoke, said he planned to testify against them at hearings arranged for today.

Legion Auxiliary Seeks 100 Pct. Membership

Winchester, Dec. 14 (Spl.).—A goal of 100 per cent membership was set today as the objective in the American Legion Auxiliary drive for 1935, launched with an appeal from Mrs. B. M. Roszel, chairman of the membership committee.

Post Ad Brings Paint Merchant Profits!

Another upturn from the hectic days of economic blue notes. We rise to relate how our ears were pleased to hear the symphonic notes of joy and contentment from Mr. Wylie M. Howell, manager of Pyus Adams Co., 1119 Ninth street northwest. He 'phoned to relate how this enterprising concern had secured the formula of selling paints to homeowners and business concerns.

"We started using Post Classified Ads every day, starting last September. A check-up shows us clearly that the cost of each sale to Post readers has been negligible. So low that I won't even discuss it. But I will tell you that we are planning to increase the lineage in The Post Classified Columns for 1935."

Thank you, Mr. Howell.

And speaking of results—results are what you want—and results are what you get when you use Post Classified Ads.

If you wish to buy, sell, rent or exchange with speed and economy—'phone "the result number," National 4200. A courteous ad-writer will aid you in preparing a result-producing Classified Ad.

You have until 5:45 p. m. tonight to have your Classified Ad appear in The Big Sunday Classified Section.

Carp-Dog-Birds Costar in Drama Of Wild, Wild Life

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Here's is a fish story sworn to by Grover Stone, merchant of Budd's Creek, about 15 miles from here.

One day while out hunting his dog Rose flushed a covey of birds that flew out to the ice near the shore of the Wicomico River and disappeared. The dog stood on the ice and pointed, refusing to come in, so Stone walked over to see what was holding him. A large carp was caught in a hole in the ice and Stone easily caught it and brought it in.

When cut open, he swears, three birds were found, whole, in the stomach of the large fish. He calls Rose the champion pointer of the county. The carp, is the consensus, also is some kind of champion.

Hopkins Denies Plan to Hold Up Virginia Relief

Virginia was assured yesterday that Federal relief would be continued until Congress threshes out the general relief situation, according to the Associated Press.

This word was given by Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, to the Associated Press after a half hour's talk with Gov. Peery, Senator Byrd and State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley.

"We have a meeting of the minds," Hopkins said. "Until Congress decides on what its program is going to be, obviously we should continue our present arrangement with Virginia."

The State has been receiving a little less than $1,000,000 a month since last spring.

Silent on Road Work.

Hopkins declined to answer whether he had agreed with the Governor that Virginia's highway construction work relief program was satisfactory to him.

However, he made what obviously was an answer to newspaper criticism of the Virginia relief program under Peery by saying:

"The Governor has cooperated very fully with this office, especially through his highway department.

"Make it clear there has been no misunderstanding between the Governor and me."

Told by the Governor there were reports in Virginia implying that Hopkins had threatened to cut off the State from Government aid, the administrator said:

The three Virginians emerged from the conference obviously pleased.

Peery, who had heard Hopkins talk to the press, said smilingly:

"Mr. Hopkins' statement covers the situation."

Glass in Conference.

Earlier, Peery and Byrd discussed the relief situation with Senator Glass, who is opposed to the principle of Federal relief, and who has said repeatedly there are 14 States paying an aggregate in Federal taxes less than Virginia, all of which are receiving more relief aid than the Old Dominion.

Hopkins' announcement was taken in informed circles as a truce in the disagreement between Virginia and the relief administrator as to what constitutes an adequate State relief program.

Virginia has insisted that its highway construction program, involving more than $7,000,000, was in reality a relief program. State officials claimed that in endeavoring to give work on the roads to needy families they have made many sacrifices to efficiency.

Officials of the relief administration took the view that the State should make some direct contribution to relief, as the Federal Government has done.

There was no indication in Hopkins' statement there was "a meeting of the minds" on that issue.

Wallace Extends Tobacco Contract

Crop Curb Bonuses to Be Same as in Last Year.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today extended into the 1935 season the production-adjustment contracts signed early in 1934 by producers of Maryland Type 32 tobacco. The contract gives the Secretary the privilege of extending it into the coming season provided contracting growers are notified in writing prior to December 15, 1934.

The notice being mailed to growers states that the contract will be continued in 1935 with the same force and effect as in 1934. The rate of reducton, 25 per cent from the base acreage and base production of the contract signer, and the rates of rental and adjustment payments are to be the same in 1935 as they were this year. The maximum reduction that could have been required in 1935 under the terms of the contract was 30 per cent.

$25,000 Damages Asked.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.). Damages of $25,000 are sought in a suit filed against Elmer Harsh by Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Ridenour here yesterday, for alleged injuries received by Mrs. Ridenour when struck by Harsh's automobile November 3, 1934.

Franklin Jury Examines 100 In Liquor Case

50 More to Be Called in Conspiracy to Violate Prohibition Laws.

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.). After hearing several more witnesses this morning, the Federal grand jury investigating an alleged conspiracy in Franklin County to violate national prohibition laws, when they were in effect, recessed over the week-end. This was the sixteenth day of the session and more than 100 witnesses have been heard. It is said that 50 witnesses have been summoned to appear here next week.

There are reports that the investigation, the most far-reaching ever conducted in a rural county in the East, will not be completed until after the first of the year. While some of the Federal agents are here, others are in Franklin County seeking additional witnesses.

Tom Cundiff and Edward Pugh, who are described as Government "key" witnesses, are being held in Rockingham jail, either for protection or to have them available for additional testimony. Both escaped from jail at Rocky Mount last September and notified Government agents of their presence. Cundiff was under sentence of three years for assault and Pugh was being held for theft of an automobile.

Visitor Dies at Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Dr. Wilton McCarthy, 62, of Des Moines, Iowa, brother of Albert H. McCarthy, manager of Carvel Hall Hotel, whom he had been visiting for some time, died suddenly last night at the hotel, of heart failure. The body will be taken to Des Moines for burial.

Social and Club Notes Of Towns and Cities in Nearby States

Fredericksburg, Va.—The Glee Club of the State Teachers College, under direction of Miss Eva Taylor Eppes, head of the music department, presented its annual program of Christmas carols for the faculty and student body at the convocation service Wednesday evening. It was assisted by Miss Mildred E. McMurtry, head of the department of foreign languages, and Miss Marion Chauncey, professor of public school music.

This was the first of several appearances which the glee club will make before the college closes for the Christmas holidays on December 19. On Sunday, December 16, the glee club will provide Christmas music for the morning service of the Presbyterian Church in Fredericksburg. On Monday, December 17, it will go on its annual Christmas caroling pilgrimage through the streets of Fredericksburg. On Tuesday afternoon, December 18, several representatives from the club will go to Stafford Court House, where they will sing Christmas carols at the community Christmas tree service.

The complete program of Christmas music presented at the convocation is as follows: "Joy to the World," Handel, by the Glee Club and audience; "Hail, Holy Babe," Bornschein, by the Glee Club; "O Holy Night," Adam, a violin duet by Misses Mildred McMurtry and Marian Chauncey; "An Old Sacred Lullaby," Corner and "How Far Is It to Bethlehem?" Shaw, by the Glee Club; "The Virgin's Lullaby" (The Coming of the King,) Dudlay Buck, by Miss Eva Taylor Eppes; "Silent Night," Gruber, triple quartet; medley of Christmas songs, violin duet, by Misses Mildred McMurtry and Marian Chauncey; "Angels We Have Heard on High," (Old French,) and "The Virgin's Slumber Song," Max Reger, by the Glee Club.

Charles Town, W. Va.,—A benefit chicken supper, dance, and card party will be held by St. James Catholic Church, of Charles Town, at the Ann Catherine Inn, Rahson, W. Va., on Tuesday. A subscription dance will follow the supper, the music to be furnished by a local orchestra.

St. Marys City (AP).—The St. Marys Female Seminary here will close for the annual Christmas holidays tomorrow. The school will reopen January 3.

Warrenton, Va.—The Warrenton County school has issued invitations to its friends to an entertainment on Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, which will include a Christmas play and a Christmas tree.

Those playing were: Mr. Linwood Lehman, Miss Nancy Brydon, Mr. Garlick, Miss Anne Morris, Mr. John Luck, Mrs. Albert Bolling, Mr. George Eager, Mrs. Carl Whitlock, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Dabney, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Abernathy, Mr. and Mrs. Armistead M. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hench, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Mitchell, Mrs. Ivey F. Lewis, Mrs. James Southall Wilson, Mrs. Mayo Cabell, Mr. Thomas L. Rosser, Miss Estelle Burthe, Mr. Arthur Kyle Davis, Miss Ruth Risher, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Starnes and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Spicer.

The prize for the North and South combination went to Mr. Cecil Garlick and Miss Anne Morris. Dr. and Mrs. Carl Speidel were runners-up.

The East and West winners were Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Gordon, and the runners-up were Mr. and Mrs. Tull.

Mrs. Armistead Gordon was chairman of the decorations committee, and Mrs. R. M. Bird and Mrs. Henry Mulholland were in charge of the refreshments. Mr. W. S. Rodman, the president, was master of ceremonies.

Greencastle, Pa.—Burgess David W. Shinham has consented to serve as chairman of the ball to be given here on January 30, President Roosevelt's birthday, for the benefit of the Infantile Parlysis Fund.

Warrenton, Va.—Invitations have been issued to 200 persons by Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, sr., of Elway Hall, for a masked ball, which will be given at North Wales Club on New Year Eve by Mrs. Spillman for Miss Anne Camden Barrett, who is a debutante this season. Miss Barrett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rice Barrett, of Ridgelea, Warrenton.

Mrs. Meredith Resigns Scottsville High Post

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl). Mrs. E. B. Meredith, science teacher at the Scottsville High School, has resigned because of ill health. The science department will be headed for the remainder of the year by Miss Virginia Wright, a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Mrs. Randolph Phillips, substitute teacher in the school, will temporarily take over the classes formerly taught by Miss Wright. Mrs. Phillips is a graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's College and did graduate work at the University of California.

Along the Tri-State Trail

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

Virginia and Maryland, with their Colonial estates and wide variety of sporting territory, have attracted many persons from other States.

Augmenting the array of distinguished persons of the business and social world who have taken up residence in those two States during the last few years comes the announcement of two recent sales of old colonial homes to out-of-state persons—one to a New Yorker and another to the Governor-elect of Pennsylvania.

Governor-elect George H. Earle, 3rd, the first Democratic governor of Pennsylvania in 44 years, has purchased a 1,338-acre hunting tract in Dorchester County, Md., which he will restock with quail, pheasant, wild turkeys and deer.

The tract of land, "Guinea," is located at the head of Fishing Bay and for more than 60 years has been known as one of the best game sections of the eastern coast. Its nine miles of shore front on Fishing Bay and the Transquaking River provide both marsh and water ducks of every variety. The land abounds in muskrats and diamond back terrapin. Both the bay and river provide excellent fishing grounds.

"Guinea" has been owned by the Wall family for 60 years, and on Tuesday was offered at public sale by the trustees of the estate of the late Jesse B. Wall. The sale price was said to be $9,950.

Maj. and Mrs. Austin McDonnell, of Warrenton, Va., have been advised that Edward Orrick McDonnell, of New York, a brother of Maj. McDonnell, has purchased the old Chilton estate, "Currioman," on the Potomac River, in Westmoreland County, Va.

The tract purchased by Mr. McDonnell consists of 400 acres, and includes the site of the original house, which was practically destroyed by fire in 1850. Nothing was left of the old residence but a chimney and part of the walls, around which a fairly modern frame house was built. An old outbuilding, thought to be the original stable belonging to the estate is still intact, and this building, the chimney and part of the walls, are made of tapestry brick, used in this section of Virginia in Colonial times.

Mr. McDonnell does not plan to rebuild on the original site in the near future, but will use the present dwelling, as a shooting lodge, and, later, he proposes erecting a handsome Colonial building. Mr. McDonnell purchased the property from the descendants of Col. Hardy Sanford, who purchased the place before the Civil War. Mr. McDonnell is a partner in the banking firm of G. M. P. Murphy & Co., of New York.

Mr. McDonnell, the purchaser, is the youngest son of the late Eugene McDonnell, of Donerville, County Cork, Ireland, and his wife was Ann Smith Chilton, daughter of Dr. John Augustus Chilton, of Warrenton.

He was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1912. In 1914 he participated in the siege and capture of Vera Cruz, and for his gallant conduct in maintaining communication between the fleet and shore forces, with a small detachment of Marines, on the roof of the famous Terminal Hotel for two days under constant shell fire, was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. He was one of the first officers to volunteer for aviation service, and was a student at the first camp in Pensacola, Fla. He was in charge of the Yale Unit in the World War, trained the men, and was made commander. At the close of the war, he was awarded the Navy Cross. Mr. McDonnell resigned from the service in 1919, and entered business.

Anne Arundel's Economy Body Wins Support

Parent - Teacher Session Urges All Citizens to Back Group.

Annapolis, Dec. 14 (AP).—The support of the people of Anne Arundel County for the newly formed efficiency and economy commission was urged today at the quarterly meeting of the county council of Parent-Teacher associations, held in the high school.

E. Churchill Murray, a member of the commission and president of the Better Government League, pointed out that the body was appointed by the county commissioners as a result of the protest of taxpayers against a high tax rate and declared it must be supported "to accomplish anything."

About 150 representatives from Parent-Teacher associations from every section of the county attended the meeting. Mrs. Harry P. Levely, president, was in the chair. The speakers were Murray, George Fox, county school superintendent, and David S. Jenkins, a former assistant superintendent.

Murray declared that the economy commission had not recommended that certain subjects be eliminated from the school curriculum but had merely questioned Fox on what economy would be effected if they were dropped.

Mrs. Levely said there had been some criticism of the council for protesting a school cut before it was made.

"It was done as a precautionary measure," she said. "It was against any possible or contemplated action which may have developed to injure the efficiency of the schools."

Fox discussed the school budget, declaring that it could not be further reduced. Jenkins compared county school expenses with other counties and advocated a sales tax to aid in carrying costs to relieve the burden carried by property owners.

Dr. Fred L. Schaff On School Board

Takes Rev. Mr. Sparrow's Place at Greencastle.

Greencastle, Pa., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Dr. Fred L. Schaff, dentist, has been appointed a member of the school board to fill the unexpired term of the Rev. C. M. Sparrow, who recently moved to Windsor, Pa.

J. O. Craig was reelected president of the board and E. P. Wine was elected vice president to succeed the Rev. Mr. Sparrow. The board announced Christmas vacation would extend from December 21 to January 2.

Farmer Is Killed Cranking His Car

Goshen, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—Samuel Blunt, 63, well-known farmer, met death at his home near here today, apparently by being run over by his own automobile.

The position of the body, discovered by William T. Warfield, a neighbor, indicated the farmer's car started moving while he was cranking it, struck and knocked him down. A wheel passed over his neck. Dr. Vernon Dyson, of Laytonsville, who was summoned, said Blunt died from a broken neck.

One son, Edward Blunt, of Detroit, survives.

Drought Seen Boosting Price Of U. S. Cattle

Thorne, Agriculture Chief, Says Reduced Number Increases Demand.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—Declaring that the marketing outlook for live stock for 1935 is bright, especially for the latter part of the year, G. B. Thorne, of the Bureau of Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, addressed a meeting of Northern Virginia livestock producers at the courthouse in Leesburg this afternoon under the auspices of the Eastern Livestock Marketing Association.

He said that, due to results of drought conditions, which reduced cattle numbers in one year to the numbers usually decreased in a regular cycle trend in eight years, there would be a greater demand for cattle on the market in 1935. Mr. Thorne stated that total grain crops in the United States in 1934 were approximately half of that of a normal year, and that this situation meant that well-finished beef cattle will appear at markets in fewer numbers than in former years.

L. T. Skeffington, manager of the Eastern Live Stock Cooperative Marketing Association, declared that in order to get more benefits of live stock production in the Eastern area, a larger number of the membership should consign their live stock to the Eastern. "If farmers are going to compete with organized packer and dealer interests they must act together," the speaker said.

Kenneth E. Litton, assistant animal husbandman at V. P. I., promoted the idea that the Eastern should maintain a contact representative to operate in each county so the membership would be constantly informed as to marketing conditions.

Several hundred live-stock producers from Fairfax, Fauquier, Clarke, Prince William, Loudoun and Warren Counties were in attendance. J. R. Lintner, Loudoun County agent, presided.

Driver Unhurt as Car Strikes Pole and Burns

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—The third wreck within a week occurred on the State road between Martinsburg and Kearneysville, W. Va., near here last night, when the car of J. R. Cookus, of Shepherdstown, swerved in the road and burned after hitting a telegraph pole.

The car was badly damaged, but the driver, sole occupant, escaped serious injury.

Fight Looms On Sales Tax In Maryland

Leaders in Both Houses Predict Opposition to Measure.

Some Favor Operation of State Lottery as Substitute.

Baltimore, Dec. 14 (AP).—Sentiments expressed by leading figures in both houses of the General Assembly indicated today a general sales tax will face determined opposition in the next Legislature.

A State-operated lottery and the legalization and taxing of handbook betting on races were among the principal counterpropositions voiced by Senators and members of the House of Delegates who were questioned.

A poll of Baltimore business men, completed by the Association of Commerce here, indicated the city's business men prefer the sales tax as the special levy which will be needed to finance added relief costs. A State-operated lottery was the second choice in the consensus.

Sales Levy Opposed.

Delegate Emanuel Gorfine, of the Fourth Legislative District, and Delegate Joseph B. Griesacker, of the Fifth Legislative District, both in the forefront of the speakership race, expressed instant opposition to the sales tax. The former said he favored the lottery plan, and Griesacker said he would back the sales tax "only as a last resort."

Thurman C. Atkinson, who probably will be chairman of Baltimore's Senate delegation, said he would fight for the legalization and taxing of handbook betting; Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, likely Democratic majority choice for Senate president, and Ridgely P. Melvin, of Anne Arundel County, also a presidential possibility, both said they were not ready to favor such a tax.

Fine, Hofferbert Hit Plan.

Senators-elect Melvin L. Fine and George Hofferbert also expressed opposition to the plan.

J. Purdon Wright, budget adviser to Gov.-elect Harry W. Nice, told a committee on unemployment problems the trend appeared to be toward a sales tax.

It was his understanding, he said, proceeds from such a tax would be dedicated to unemployment relief

Three Southern Conference Blocs Ready for Membership Fight

Tech Defeats C. U. Frosh, 33 to 25

Trails as Last Quarter Opens, but Rallies to Clinch Game.

Carroll, Card Forward, Takes Scoring Honors With 18 Points.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE basket ball season opened brightly for Tech High yesterday as Coach Artie Boyd's 1935 model five rolled smoothly to a 33-to-25 victory over the Catholic University freshmen at the Tech gym. It was the first game of the season for both teams.

Tech forced to shift into high gear in the last quarter to pull out the victory, but the impressive way it went about it was enough o establish the Maroon as certain to be in the thick of the interhigh championship race again this season.

After leading at 8 to 3 at the end of the first quarter and 15 to 11 at the half, Tech found itself trailing 23 to 22 as the last quarter opened. But the Manual Trainers came back and, with a sudden and decisive onslaught, put the game away.

Daly Sinks Two.

C. U. took a 3-to-0 lead at the start, but Tech hit back to keep the Freshmen from scoring further in the first period, Daly sinking two baskets and Billings and Roland, one apiece for the 8-to-3 advantage.

The high school boys had a hard time keeping burly Irish Carroll, lightning-like C. U. forward, in check in the second quarter. The Syracuse (N. Y.) lad shot four baskets to keep his team within striking distance.

Three baskets by Carroll as the second half opened, and one by his center, Jerome Epply, while Tech was scoring 3 points, transformed the high school's 15-to-1 lead into a 19-to-18 lead for C. U. Baskets by Jimmy Roland and Milt Mullitz showed Tech in the lead again, but Epply and Woody counted from the floor for the freshmen, to give them the 23-to-22 lead as the third quarter ended.

Takes Lead Again.

With the start of the last period. Mulltiz cut fast to take a pass from Roland and score, putting the hgih school in the lead. Daly widened it with another basket. and John Billings, lanky Tech center, began hitting the scoring column, to score three times in the last few minutes and assume the final outcome.

Carroll was the individual sensation of the day. He was all over the court, and tallied eight times from the floor and wtice on free shots. for 18 points.

Daly formed the bulkhead of the Tech style of play, both on the offense and defense, but the Tech teamwork was more impressive than the playing of any one member of the team.

Pan Toy Takes Fair Grounds Feature

Never in Danger and Wins in Gallop; Blind Hills Finishes Second.

FAIR GROUNDS, New Orleans, Dec. 14 (AP).—Pan Toy, owned by A. J. Halliwell and ridden by T. Vercher, outclassed his field in the Pass Christioan Purse this afternoon as he won the mile and a sixteenth Fair Grounds feature in a agllop over G. J. Mueninghaus' Blind Hills, with B. Hernandez' Brass Buttons in third place.

Pan Toy, sent to the front immediately, never was in danger. Cordon Bleu was in closest pursuit of the leader for the first 6 furlongs, but Blind Hills came up from behind and followed Pan Toy home.

Pan Toy was favorite, returning $4.40 for $2, and negotiated the race in 1:47 2-5.

Wig Rose Winner.

Wig Rose, owned by F. Davitt, and ridden by L. Turner, won his second straight race of the meeting when he took the 5½-furlong dash that opened the program. He led his field from flag to flag. Normahal came fast to be second, and Mentality, the favorite, was third. Wig Rose paid $15.60 for $2.

Turner came right back in. the second race and landed Mrs. E. Black's Eager Belle, the winner of the five and a half furlongs sprint. Eager Belle just lasted to win by a nose over Goron. Bad Penny was third. Eager Belle paid $5.60 for $2.

Sir Kai Triumphs.

Sir Kai, owned by Mrs. J. E. Cochran and ridden by Pat Petrella, accounted for the third race, which was at six furlongs. Breaking well, Sir Kai shoow off Rouless, the favorite, and barely lasted to stall off the fast finish of Objection, which came with a rush and missed getting up by a short head. Rouless was third. Sir Kai paid $7.00 for $2.

Broadstep, second choice, easily won the fourth event, a five and a half furlong dash. Jockey R. Tilden stepped him off to a flying start and he was never in danger, beating Polas Flag hard held. Moring was third. The winner paid $6 for a $2 ticket.

Western Bows By Point at Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 14 (Spl.).—A fighting Western High School basketball team from Washington was nosed out here today by Baltimore City College, 23 to 22, after staging a last quarter rally which rolled up 11 points.

The Washington team, apparently badly beaten as it went into the last period, trailing 21 to 11, suddenly hit a scoring streak, which was nipped only by the final whistle.

City College took a 6-3 lead in the first quarter and widened it to 11-7 before the half ended. The local boys ran up their advantage 11 more points in the third quarter while Western was scoring but four but the final quarter found the visitors staging their spectacular rally which found the City College followers grateful when the timekeeper's whistle sounded.

Officials to Weigh Hanley Case Today

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 14 (AP).—Formal action on whether Dick Hanley shall coach the Northwestern football team in 1935 was deferred until tomorrow, but feeling that he will resign was strengthened today.

The faculty athletic committee of the university put over its meeting until tomorrow, and Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern, indicated he would follow the wishes of the committee.

Hanley said he had planned to resigns after the football season, following a year of friction with a strong faculty group, but decided to await developments. There was almost no criticism of Hanley's coaching ability, indicating that faculty opposition was the chief reason for the situation.

Professional Dancer Is Ping Pong Favorite

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Table tennis and tap dancing may not be closely related, but Jimmy McClure, 18-year-old professional dancer from Indianapolis, is finding that the latter comes in handy in his progress through the American zone table tennis tournament at the Downtown A. C.

Stepping sprightly around his end of the table to get into position for a powerful forehand smash, McClure, who also is junior lawn tennis champion of his home city, is a favorite to win the title and represent the United States in the world's championship in London.

28 Consecutive Strikes Called Bowling Record

Hannibal, Mo., Dec. 14 (AP).—C. J. Murphy believes his 28 consecutive strikes in a match with F. C. Hawkins is a ten-pin bowling record.

Murphy won a five-game series, 1,307 to 1,218. His 28 strikes came in the second, third and fourth games, when he tallied 280, 300 and 254. His other scores were 225 and 248.

Terry Seeks Peace With Writers

N. Y. Baseball Reporters Shocked at Invitation to Luncheon.

Giants' Manager Unpopular in Gotham Despite Success.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Luncheon invitations are a dime a dozen in this town, but New York sports writers received one today that straightened them up in amazement and made them disbelieve their eyes. It was from Bill Terry, whom many of the writers regard as their archest of arch enemies.

Observers, on the sidelines during the bitter feud between the New York Giants' manager and the men who write about his baseball club, interpreted this invitation as the forerunner of a peace treaty.

This luncheon, at which Terry and the writers are expected to plank their cards on the table to the accompaniment of verbal blasts and counter blasts. may settle one of baseball's most unique situations.

Unpopular in Gotham.

Here in the world's largest city, at the helm of one of the Nation's best-known ball clubs is Memphis Bill Terry. During his two full seasons as pilot he proved a brilliant success, boosting the Giants to a world championship in 1933 and finishing second in the 1934 National League race. His financial shrewdness and economies in adding new players enabled the Giauts to clear $99,000 in 1933, after several lean years, and to profit more than $200,000 in 1934.

But meanwhile Terry, because of an unfortunate temperament, became so unpopular with New York sports writers and large section of fans that the future welfare of the club was endangered. Something had to be done. Daniel M. Daniel of the World-Telegram, chairman of the New York chapter of baseball writers, went into a huddle with Giant officials. Today's invitation resulted.

No One Overt Act.

Accusing writers can point to no one overt act. Just his general attitude. An attitude of ultra independence, the same attitude which placed him so often in hot water as a player. He was always a hold-out in the spring.

Writers who traveled with the club claim he would not cooperate in giving out news. That he would not permit them to call him at his hotel room, that he insisted that they talk to him at the field, and that at the field he was always too busy to talk to them. He rebuffed a girl reporter in Boston with what Terry described as "frankness," but what the writers called "rudeness." In New Orleans he proclaimed hat he was running the club, not newspapermen. He declined ungraciously to give out an end-season message to New York fans. etc., etc.

Even Terry's most caustic critics admire him privately as a great manager, a clean liver and a good family man. and a shrew business man. A sizeable portion of the fans is still firmly behind him. A pool of writers today revealed that most of them would be just as delighted as Terry to have the whole matter threshed out and rectified.

Class C Schools In Court Tourney

Oakton, Natural Bridge, Edinburg, Phenix Win.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—Four Class C high school basket ball teams were eliminated in the annual competition for the class championshp here otday.

Those victorious were Oakton High, defeating Chuckatuck, 28 to 20; Natural Bridge, defeating Floyd, 29 to 22; Edinburg, defeating Washington, 25 to 14, and Phenix defeating Beaverdam, 20 to 19.

The Natural Bridge-Floyd game was a rough-and-tumble match, and the Oakton-Chuckatuck developed into real high school competition.

Alumni Chapters Asked to Send Delegates to Meeting.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—The University of Virginia's stand in athletic and academic circles will be considered by the Alumni Association chapters and the alumni advisory council at a meeting to be held at the university on January 12.

It was announced today that the Alumni Association has sent out invitations to all of its 35 active chapters to have delegates at the meetinf.

Acting in accordance with a request by Forrest Hyde, of New York, president of the Alumni Association, T. Munford Boyd, of Charlottesville, chairman of the council, has called the meeting to consider two general problems.

Report to Be Aired.

Foremost is the situation involving athletics and in particular the report made to President John Lloyd Newcomb by the special committee he appointed. The second is the standing of the university in academic circles as shown by the report on graduate study made to the American Council on Education.

Each of the university's 35 active chapters is asked to hold a chapter meeting before January 12 to elect delegates for the alumni advisory council. Each chapter has only one vote in the council session:, but can name from two to five delegates.

He is scheduled to start in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap February 23, against such outstanding thoroughbreds as Cavalcade, Mate, Twenty Grand and Faireno.

Equipoise has been in training at the Whitney farm. He will be sent through final conditioning after his arrival on the coast.

Reds' Chief Jibes A. L. On Night Play Criticism

Cincinnati, Dec. 14 (AP).—Larry MacPhail, red-headed general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, contended today that the American League "had better forget night baseball and spend some time worrying why they've lost three of the last four world's series."

He wired his comment home from New York, indicating himself as aroused at American League criticism of the National League in granting the Reds permission to play night baseball.

Hockey Lads Let Sticks Fly Just as Aborigines Once Did

By George Dixon
(Pinch-Hitting for Paul Gallico).

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Seventeen million, six hundred and twenty thousand nine hundred and three years ago come Christmas Eve—unless Darwin is off on his figures again—the hairy forbears of Dede Klein and Nelson Stewart roamed the steaming swamps of a new world just torn loose from the sun the previous Thursday. When time hung heavy they would plop a pterodactyl with a stone club or tweak the tail of a dinosaur. But there was no real harm in them—not unless they became upset over something.

Their rages then were sudden and terrible. Pitecanthropus erectus was the Stewart ancestor. Old Pithy, they called him. Once he encountered Klein's great-great-great and great-great grandpappy, Simian the Slugger. Sim called Pithy the neanderthal equivalent of a dirty bum, batted him with a mace to make it stick and they tangled in the ooze. A saber-toothed tiger, who refereed, threatened to disqualify both but it turned turned out he was only kidding.

Descendants Pop Up.

Pithy and Sim passed away. They got too fresh with a prehistoric relative of Jack Dempsey, some say. Their descendants popped up from time to time with the playboys of Sodom and Gomorrah, with Attila the Hun, Vikings, the first Irish football team, until finally—refined and polished down by the 17,620,903 years of civilization—Klein and Stewart met on the ice in Madison Square Garden—Dede as a forward for the New York Americans, and Nels, as big and powerful as old Pithy himself, for the Boston Bruins

For a period and a half they were the politest fellows you ever saw. Then they crashed back of the net. A few choice words nad whee-ee-ee! They went right back to the swamps, insenate, raging primitives, obsessed only with the desire to kill. Swinging his hockey stick the way Sim flailed his club, Klein slashed Stewart across the skul, opening his scalp from his eyes haf back of his head. Stewart, all reason banged out of him, flew at Dede and shattered his club over his attacker's skull.

Crowdw Is Affected.

Blood streamed down from the combatants. At the sight of the crimson flow civilization fled from the ten other players. The ice was alive with wicked kilers, bent on cutting each other to shreds. If affected the crowd. In the wild yells was the lust for blood that sent the first man raging against the saber-toothed tiger.

Almost blinded, Stewart wrenched free from the restraining grip of the referees. He spied Klein staggering from the ice. With a bellow that rose above the din, he rushed at Klein, and raising the shaft of his shattered shillelah, dropped Klein kicking. Red Conn, Dede's teammate, flew at Stewart and doubled him up like an accordion with a brutal whack in the ribs.

Half fainting, Stewart was carried across the street to Polyclinic Hospital. I followed half an hour later and discovered that Stewar had not yet come all the way back from the swamps. He had stepped about three-fifths of the way. He was an early North American Indian.

"How do you feel?" I asked, not able to think of anything else at the moment. The Indian grunted. "Ugh! ugh!" "What was that? I didn't quite catch it," I said. "Ugh! ugh! gway! gway!" Old Chief Smacked-in-the-Totem gasped. "What did he say?" I asked the

Colonial Five In 2d Game Tonight

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S new quintet goes fo another trial spin tonight in the H strett hippodrome with Randolph-Macon supplying the opposition. Hostilities get under way at 8 o'clock.

No changes in the Colonial lineup are contemplated by Coach Roland Logan. Hal Kiesel will start at center, with Dallas Shirley and Walter Bakum, guards; Capt. Jim Howell and Ben Goldfadden, forwards. These same men started against Shenandoah in the curtain-raiser last week.

Logal is looking ahead to next week's game with Indiana. The Indiana game, incidentally, is to be played at Roosevelt High School to accommodate the large throng expected.

Sees Improvement.

When the Hoosiers blow into town Logan expects to have the team performing smoothly, using both the fast-breaking attack and more orthodox style of working the ball into the net. Goldfadden and Bakum are the mainsprings in the slower style and both handle the ball in laudable fashion, but G. W. is still a fast-breaking team at heart.

The Colonial's game with Baltimore U., scheduled January 4, has been shoved back to February 18 because of a conflict in dates on Baltomore's schedule.

Committee In Secret Session

One Group Wants Six or None Admitted and Another, None.

Third Would Give Bids to William and Mary and Davidson.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 14 (AP).—The hopes and the fears of six Dixie colleges were inmeshed tonight in the deliberations of the Southern Conference committee on membership.

As the voting representatives from ten Southern Conference schools gathered for tomorrow's annual meeting the committee on membership headed by C. P. Miles, athletic director at V. P. I. met to consider the membership claims of two teams each from Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina for places in the conference.

May Be Brought Into Open.

It was definitely indicated that the committee would attempt to smoke the membership question into the open with a resolution recommending that the conference be increased from 10 to 16 members.

In the balance hung the fate of William and Mary and Richmond University, from Virginia; Davidson and Wake Forest from North Carolina, and Furman and The Citadel from South Carolina.

There were three definite schools of thought. One said take in all the six applicants, or none.

Another group said take in none, expressing the belief that a compact 10-school league would be more to be desired than a 16-school group.

Favor Admitting Two.

There was a third group which apparently favored the applications of ancient William and Mary, a school that is antedated only by Harvard, and Davidson.

The executive committee met tonight in closed conference, with the fireworks scheduled for tomorrow morning's open meeting of the circuit.

Meanwhile, a committee headed by Wallace Wade, Duke coach, met to decide the question of choosing officials for football contests in which Southern Conference schools participate.

Eligibility Question.

Among the perplexing problems confronting the conference were the always controversial topics of eligibility and the status of transfers from other schools.

The broadcasting of Southern Conference football games, to which the conference heretofore has been definitely opposed, apparently would be permitted if the proposals of several voting representatives, including Forrest Fletcher, president of the conference are approved by the conference.

Fans Excited By Wrong Numbers

Mistake in Placing on Results Board Gives Crowd Added Thrill.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Writer).

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, Dec. 14.—The favorite player, that specie of racegoer who sticks to past performances, workouts and figures, came into his own at this mountain race track today. In five of seven races the public choice took off the main end of the purse, and on four occasions the winner was held at odds-on in the wagering. In the other two events, well-played second choices were first to greet the judges, leaving the longshot betters nothing to do but count thei rlosses and wait for tomorrow.

Ideal racing weather prevailed. In fact, a warm sun shone all afternoon, and once during the program the crowd had reason to believe that the placing judges had gone crazy with the heat. In the third race, Soupcon and Grand Rox were locked in a thrilling duel at the finish, with Daisy Buck running in third place. The finish was close, but there were few in the stands who thought that Soupcon did not win.

Wrong Numbers Posted.

To the amazement of those present, the finish numbers were displayed on the odds board as two, four and five, indicating that the horse Beaumont, obviously far back in the field, had been named the winner, with Grand Rox second and Soupcon third. From the stands came a bedlam of shouts, booes and catcalls. Many excited persons rushed toward the judges' stand waving tickets. Messengers rushed from the press box to the judges, who, unaware of the mistake, probably were looking over the entries for the next race.

A wild wigwagging soon took place between the judges' stand and the results board located in the infield and, after several minutes, the five, four and six of Soupcon, Grand Rox and Daisy Buck were displayed. The "official sign" ended the drama.

It was explained later that the man who flashes the finish numbers to the operator of the board showed the number while holding the five of Soupcon upside down. In the confusion, the board man also mistook the six of Daisy Buck for five.

The parade of favorites extended into the feature race, which saw Dark Vision, one of the most consistent horses on the ground, score a two-length victory over Make Believe, which, in turn, had a three-length margin over Sisko.

Dark Vision, owned and operated by F. C. Frisbie, played the part of a perfect favorite. In charge of Jockey A. Tryon, whb was completing a riding double, Dark Vison bounced away from his field soon after the start of the mile and an eighth contest, dubbed the Wheeling Purse. He was never headed and at one stage had opened a ead of five lengths.

Sisko Pays $5.00.

Make Beleve, ancient and honorable plater, made a game bid in the stretch, but it only served to take the second money from a tiring Sisko. The winner paid a $5.60 mutuel.

Appear, Pennate, Star Queen and Golden Play was the order of the odds-on parade. Played as if they were already in front of their respective stables being cooled out after a victory, ths quartet ran in excellent fashion.

The opening event, the first run over the new 6-furlong Charles Town course, went to Kharaon, a $7.60 shot, excellently ridden by Jockey Tryon.

Fred Perry Routed By Quist, Australian

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 14 (AP). Fred Perry, of England, world's ranking tennis player, lost his title as champion of Victoria today when he was soundly beater. in the semi-finals of the annual tournament by Adrain Quist, young Australian star. The scores were 6-0, 6-2, 6-0.

The court was extremely slow after a heavy rain and Perry was unable to play his usual fast game. Quist produced masterful tennis and was in complete control throughout.

Stocks Yield Fraction Again; Trading Dull

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Ripples of buying and selling animated some stocks today, but the main market tide continued to flow sluggishly along a narrow channel.

For the third session there was virtually no change in the position of the share list generally. Traders stood by patiently waiting for news to break the stalemate.

Brisk dealing in a few low-priced issues accounted for much of the turnover, totaling 928,210 shares, against 997,250 yesterday.

Retail Trade Improvement.

Sustained improvement in retail trade and a sharp recovery in carloadings last week, exceeding the usual seasonal proportions, helped to keep sentiment in financial quarters fairly cheerful. A stable bond market, with highest grade issues holding around peak prices for the year, and a rally in grains bolstered bullish faith in the share market.

Most of the buying interest centered in speculative preferred shares and individual issues favored by the current news. Pivotal stocks like United States Steel, American Can, Montgomery Ward and Chrysler were stalled in a rut.

Disclosure of the recapitalization plans of Wilson & Co. touched off selling its shares, canceling part of the recent gains. The preferred stock of the packing company fell more than 5 points, the A shares nearly 3 and the common about a point.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum.

Heavy trading in Radio-Keith-Orpheum, with one block of 25,000 shares changing hands near the close at 1¾, enlivened the market. It closed at 2, up ⅛. The company is in receivership, but improvement in theater business has sharpened interest in reorganization possibilities.

The biggest price change recorded in a long while was on a 50-share lot of Coca-Cola International, sold at 314, a gain of 133 points over the previous sale. However, it had not been traded in since July, 1933, and meanwhile shares of Coca-Cola, which it was organized to control, have been moving upward.

Influenced by heaviness in some of the leaders, the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks sagged one-tenth of a point to 72.4.

Bulgarian Loan Coupons Will Be Paid in Part

New York, Dec. 14.—Speyer & Co. and J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation, as American fiscal agents for the above loans, have received from the League Loans Committee (London) the following communique:

"The League Loans Committee (London) announces that the Bulgarian government have drawn attention to the growing exchange difficulties of Bulgaria, which the government urges, makes it impossible to continue to carry out the arrangements which provided for payment of the coupons of the two Bulgarian League loans at 32½ per cent). The Bulgarian government have, however, on representations from the League Loans Committee (London) transferred a sufficient sum to enable the coupon due January 1, 1935, on the 1926 loan to be met at the agreed rate of 32½ per cent. Futher negotiations are in progress and the financial committee of the League of Nations, at the request of the Bulgarian government, has undertaken a further investigation into the situation of the Bugaria."

The American fiscal agents announce that the January 1, 1935, coupons of the Kingdom of Bulgaria 7 per cent settlement loan of 1926 will be paid on or after that date at the rate of $11.37 per $25 coupon and $5.98 per $17.50 coupon, upon surrender of such coupons, accompanied by appropriate letter of transmittal, at the office of either Speyer & Co. or J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation.

By Special Writer of The Post.

Wholesale price indices are again advancing after declining from the peak points of early September. The general wholesale commodity price index of the United States Bureau of Labor rose to 76.7 per cent of the 1926 average on December 8 when the index stood at 77.8 and was over 8 per cent above the level of the corresponding week in 1933. The Journal of Commerce index for the week ended December 8 stood at 77.3 (1927-29 equal to 100) and was higher than on the corresponding date of any of the four preceding years. The three-year peak point of last September was also surpassed. Other indices also show a rising trend following a rather extended recession. Grains and foodstuffs take the lead in the advance which is attributed chiefly to the effect of drought and acreage reductions. Other commodity lines have been relatively steady, indicating fairly stable business activity. Day-to-day business indices are, however, beginning to rise slowly, and the improvement is being reflected in some general advances in nonagricultural products.

The most interesting aspect of the current price movements is the fact that they mirror changes in current conditions of demand and supply, and current comment upon the price outlook is not so colored as formerly, by speculations concerning the future value of the dollar or the possibility the inflation will "take hold" suddenly and bring about a rapid increase in prices. On the contrary, the agricultural price forecasters are concerned chiefly with such matters as the crop prospects of the coming year, and the effect of the drought-created shortages of the past season.

Campaign to Aid Building Considered Important Factor.

Again, the campaign to revive building activities and stimulate the heavy industries seems to be considered at the moment a more important factor in determining price trends for industrial raw materials than any of the monetary influences that may be working to raise prices. Less is heard, too, about the price-raising effects of NRA activities upon the level of prices. Moreover, efforts to maintain prices by agreement under the codes are likely to be relaxed under the new regime instead of pushed. So, for the time being, price anaylses and forecasts are more like those that were usual in the days before the Government embarked upon price-raising activities.

The appearance of stability or of relative stability of the price structure, as contrasted with earlier, violent movements, should not, however, deceive the observer into concluding that no surprises are in store. Even if there is no further devaluation of the dollar, the price level of the future is at the mercy of the spending agencies of Government. The effect of a continuing budgetary deficit upon prices is well known. As the former Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas said in a recent address in New ork, a succession of deficits will inevitably lead to inflation, and deficits are unavoidable unless spending is curbed drastically. Effective inflation, indeed, can only come through the creation of additional purchasing power forced into circulation by Government spending.

Support to Price Structure Is Regarded Somewhat Inflationary.

The support which has been given to our price structure in recent weeks is undoubtedly to some extent inflationary in origin, in that it represents buying demands created by the disbursement of Government funds not offset by tax receipts. The stimulus given to retail trade in sections which have benefited especially from relief disbursements helps to raise wholesale prices of the bought goods.

The danger to the price structure, therefore, depends not so much upon whether the Administration is willing to surrender its efforts to raise prices by further monetary manipulation as upon whether it can and will control spending proclivities that would lead ultimately to a catastrophic kind of inflation. The basis for such inflation is laid in huge volume of excess reserves, in profits from dollar devaluation in laws permitting issue of greenbacks, which might, it is estimated, provide for deposit expansion in the neighborhood of $120,000,000,000. Facing these potentialities, surmise regarding the level of prices during the coming months becomes more in the nature of guesswork than ordinarily. These dangerous forces may be kept relatively innocuous, if budgetary economies put a stop to debt increases. If not, the warnings of Mr. Douglas will no doubt prove to be in the nature of a prophecy.

Gold Stocks Again Soar to New High

Total Rises $19,000,000 in Week to Sum of $8,180,000,000.

(Associated Press.)

Monetary gold stocks of the United States soared further into new high territory during the week ended December 12.

The weekly condition statement of the Federal Reserve Bank disclosed a rise of $19,000,000 during the week, bringing the total to $8,180,000,000. This figure is $4,144,000,000 in excess of the comparable date last year, which however, was before the gold content of the dollar had been reduced.

The week's changes witnessed also an increase of $39,000,000 in the reserve balance along with the bank, bringing this total to $4,112,000,000, an amount $1.474,000,000 in excess of last year and at least $2,000,000,000 in excess of the balance as required by law.

Bond Market Is Irregular; Sags Slightly

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Definite trends were absent in the bond market today and closing prices in most departments were moderately irregular.

While prime investment issues held around their top levels, secondary loans were a trifle erratic. The trading volume dropped to $10,754,000, par value, compared with $11,841,000 yesterday, and The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds eased one-tenth of a point to 86.

Profit Taking Appears.

Profit-taking entered into some of the groups. At the same time, except in scattered loans, news incentives for a continuation of the advance appeared to be lacking.

There were a few outstanding performers. McCrory Stores 5½s spurted 4 points to 83¼, and gainers of 1 or 2 or more included American I. G. Chemical 5½s at 105½, Colon Oil 6s at 43¼, Central Pacific Transit 6s at 68½, International Telephone debenture 4½s at 58¾, Montana Power 5s at 93⅜, Paramount-Publix 5½s at 65. Pure Bakeries 5s at 85 and R.K.O. 6s at 36.

Warren Bros. 6s lost 5 points at 33½ and among other losers of a point or more, were New Haven collateral 6s at 60, New Orleans Public Service 5s at 35, International Paper 5s at 72 and Alleghany Corporation 5s at 62.

Federals Are Dull.

Dullness ruled in the United States Government list, but gains of 1-32d to 2-32ds of a point predominated. The turnover here amounted to only about $990,000.

The foreign section, while quiet, was generally firm. The defaulted Chilean bonds were relatively active at advances of 1 to 2 points on word that the South American government expected to put into effect a new plan of debt adjustment on January 1.

Gains of a point or so were also shown by issues of Belgium and Paris-Orleans Railway.

Curb Displays Steadier Tone; Activity Fair

Fluctuations Are Generally Fractional; Sales Total 195,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—The recent irregular price tendencies gave way to a steadier tone on the Curb Exchange today. The market was active with transfers at 195,000 shares, about the same as yesterday.

Fluctuations generally were fractional. A few specialties varied a point or so at the close. Metals displayed some improvement. Alcohols, oils and utilities were all narrow.

United Shoe Machinery gained 2⅜ points on top of its advance yesterday. Lake Shore and Singer Manufacturing added a point each, but Parker Rust Proof and Montgomery Ward showed similar declines.

American Cyanamid B receded fractionally, while Electric Bond & Share, Wright Hargreaves, International Petroleum, Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams and Sherwin-Williams finished unchanged to a trifle higher.

Shares of Carolina Power & Light 6 and 7 per cent preferred were strong on small transfers, the former advancing about 13 points.

Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 14 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Trade in the Boston wool market tended to be less active than during last week. A number of concerns, however, continued to receive a good volume of business. The greater portion of the movement was on bulk French combing 64s and finer territory wools, most types being available at prices under 70 cents, scoured basis. Occasionally a little call was received on the better staple French combing wool at prices slightly above 70 cents. Much of the current demand was for the short French combing and clothing lines in original bags at 63@65 cents, scoured basis.

Wheat Values Move Higher On Crops Data

Cotton Prices Advance 6 to 18 Points on Most Deliveries.

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—Material upturns of wheat prices today accompanied unfavorable reports as to first threshings in Argentina, together with sharply reduced estimates of wheat yields in Australia.

Apprehension over persistent dryness of domestic wheat territory Southwest and also Northwest had an additional bullish effect. A dearth of selling pressure both in wheat and corn was an outstanding feature.

Wheat closed firm, ⅝ to 1⅝ above yesterday's finish; May, 1.01⅞ to 1.02; Corn, ¾ to 1⅛ up; May, 89¾ to 89⅝; oats, ¾ to 1⅛ advanced, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

In notable contrast with action of the Chicago wheat market was the fact that wheat in Rotterdam today was down to the lowest price level of the season, bearishly affected by efforts of the French to rid themselves of surplus low-grade wheat. On the other hand, the Liverpool wheat market for the first time in a long while displayed strength which was maintained to the close.

Moreover, domestic red winter wheat, less in demand usually than hard winter wheat, appeared to be now attracting milling interest, and at St. Louis today commanded the highest premium on the crop as compared with Chicago May contracts.

Cotton Market

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Cotton showed increasing activity with prices advancing rather sharply during today's late trading, following private reports from some sections of the South that farmers were voting in favor of continuing the Bankhead act next year. The general market closed very steady, 1 point higher on December and up 6 to 18 points on later deliveries.

Early fluctuations were narrow. Private reports from the South concerning the prospective vote on the Bankhead referendum were interpreted as bullish. January advanced from 12.47 to 12.55 and May from 12.52 to 12.62, while October was relatively firm selling up to 12.45, making net advances of 9 to 18 points on January and later deliveries. Closing quotations were a few points off from the best on most positions.

The trading included some rather heavy switching from old to new crop positions at narrowing differences. At the close the difference between July and October was only 11 points, compared with 24 points yesterday.

The late advance was accompanied by reports that a better demand had developed in the cloth market at firm prices.

Year's Upturn In Advertising Cited as Index

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Fla., Dec. 14.—One of the best available business indicators is the monthly report of newspaper advertising linage for the Nation.

February, 1933, was the low point of the depression for advertising. Since then linage totals have shown a continuous upward trend.

For 14 consecutive months sales of advertising space have registered gains over the same month of the previous year. Magazine and raido advertising, likewise, show a big improvement over 1933.

Saving on Advertising.

This uptrend in advertising is very encouraging. It means that manufacturers and merchants alike are looking forward to better times. Unfortunately, however, advertising is more an indicator of currently improving business than a forecaster of a future business pick-up as it should be.

Under other words, in slumps business men fail to increase their advertising appropriations in order to prevent a drop in sales. In fact, they go to the other extreme. As their business falls off, they curtail their advertising.

Thus, one of the most valuable methods of ironing out the humps and bumps in the business curve has been neglected.

Neglect Called Short-sighted.

It seems to me this is very short-sighted. Business men apparently have forgotten one vital point. That is the part which advertising has played in our national greatness.

We can not give advertising credit for creating our standard of living; but mass production could not have done its job if advertising had not brought about mass distribution.

Business men forgot this when they temporarily lost faith in advertising as their sales slumped during the depression. By so doing they entered a vicious cycle—decreasing trade brought a decline in advertising budgets; less advertising space brought a further drop in sales; and so on down the toboggan slide.

APPLE MARY — By Martha Orr

I COULD HARDLY BELIEVE MY EYES, WHEN I SAW MRS. HARDIE LAUGHING WITH THAT MAN, OVER HOW THEY'D MADE ME MOVE MY APPLE CART TO A NEW CORNER, AN' NOW SHE WANTS ME TO MOVE TO A BACK ROOM.
MRS. HARDIE, THERE ISN'T ENOUGH SUNSHINE, IN THAT BACK ROOM, FOR DENNIE, AN' I CAN'T PAY MORE FOR TH' FRONT ONE — SO WHAT?
WELL, I DON'T WANT T'HAVE ANY HARD FEELINGS, BUT I HEARD YOU TALKING TO THAT FELLOW, LAST NIGHT, AND I THINK IT'D BE BETTER IF WE'D MOVE —
OH, YOU DO? WELL, REMEMBER THIS-
YOU'RE RENTING THAT ROOM BY TH' MONTH, SO YOU STILL OWE ME FOR THE LAST TWO WEEKS OF THIS ONE.
BUT I HAVEN'T TH' MONEY. MY APPLE SALES HAVE FALLEN OFF SO, SINCE I HAD T'MOVE TO THAT NEW CORNER!

YES, YES— I KNOW! BUT HAVE FAITH IN OLD HORACE FLUSHMAW!
YEARS OF EXPERIENCE QUALIFY ME TO PROGNOSTICATE THAT WEALTH WILL SOON BE OURS IF WE PROCEED WITH WISDOM AND CAUTION! WE MUST NOT BE HASTY! NAY, A PREMATURE STEP MAY JEOPARDIZE EVERYTHING!
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
THE GLORIOUS YULETIDE IS UPON US — I AM BUT WAITING TO DECIDE HOW I CAN UTILIZE THE SPIRIT ENGENDERED BY THE OCCASION TO LAUNCH OUR BRILLIANT PROJECT WITH THE GREATEST PROMISE OF SUCCESS—
BUT WHAT HAS THIS TO DO WITH DIXIE AND HER DOLL? — AH! — DESTINY HAS STRANGE WAYS OF TAKING TWO SEEMINGLY DISTANT AND UNRELATED THREADS OF LIFE AND SUDDENLY WEAVING THEM TOGETHER!

THE GUMPS — Moving Day

WELL- I HOPE YOU'RE SATISFIED- YOU CAN SEE NOW WHAT YOUR CRUELTY HAS BROUGHT TO MY DAUGHTER- HER POOR FINGER- SHE MIGHT HAVE BEEN SCALDED TO DEATH- SLAVING IN THE KITCHEN LIKE A LITTLE CINDERELLA-
MOTHER DEAR- WHAT IS THIS ALL ABOUT? WHAT'S THE TROUBLE?
SHE'S ANGRY BECAUSE I LET YOU WORK IN THE KITCHEN-
IT'S NOT ONE THING- IT'S EVERYTHING- WE'RE NOT USED TO LIVING LIKE THIS- DOING ALL OUR OWN WORK- ALL OUR LIVES WE'VE LIVED IN LUXURY- MY DAUGHTER DIDN'T HAVE TO MARRY YOU TO MOVE INTO A HOVEL-OH, MAMA! DEAR MAMA! PLEASE!
DON'T TRY TO STOP ME! JUST CALL A TAXICAB— I'VE STOOD ALL THE COOKING AND WORKING I CAN PUT UP WITH— I'M LEAVING THIS HOUSE FOREVER—
